REMARKS ON SECOND EDITION.

My original design for publishing the second edition of Thurston Genealogies was to reproduce all that the first edition contained, with such additions as I have been able to collect. But the additions were so voluminous I found it necessary to leave out the wills, lengthy history of individuals, and some historical matter, amounting to one hundred and thirteen pages, which appeared in the first edition. In all such cases, however, I have referred to the omissions in foot notes, giving the page where they can be found. The number of these references being nearly one hundred, shows that both volumes will be required to make the history complete.

Since publishing the first edition I have ascertained where the family of Moses Thurston of Hollis originated, and have incorporated it with the Daniel family, where it belongs. Numerous other families have found their ancestors, and appear in connection. I am satisfied that the families of Daniel and John were relatives, tho unable to connect them. I have a collection of over two hundred photographs from the principal families represented in this volume, and a critical examination strengthens my belief that they are all kin to each other. There are certain characteristics that run thro the whole. The facial contour and general make-up are singularly alike. Then again the mental development, aims of life, religious character, and family names, all tend to strengthen the opinion that they are homogeneous, and sprang from one root.

The book is not a mere collection of names and dates, but in every case where it was possible the business, residence and religion is given, making it a readable book as well as one of reference.

The seventeen years that I have spent upon this work have given me such an interest in it that I shall still keep an interleaved book for corrections and additions as long as I live, and sincerely request every one to send me all such information, so that one record may be complete.

There are 10,520 names of Thurstons and their children indexed, which does not include those who died under two years of age. Other names indexed, 17,976.

A SKETCH OF HERALDRY.

A FEW explanations in regard to heraldry are needed for the understanding of coats-of-arms. According to de Fronsac, heraldry originated with the later empire of the Romans, when the ensigns of all nations under Roman authority — nearly the whole world — were collected and recorded. The ensign of Gallia (France) was the cock, that of the Romans the eagle, that of the Scandinavians the horse, that of some of the eastern nations the griffin, that of the Persians the dove. Certain nations had certain colors; red was that of the Keltai, blue was that of the Picti, yellow was that of the Persian.

Individual families began to bear distinguishing marks from the time of Constantine, the first Christian emperor, who instituted the first order of Chevaliers, that of the Constantinian Order of St. George, whose members wore on their breasts the ensign of the cross.

It became the custom, from that time down, for families to bear some mark of distinction provided they had the right to carry arms. Now only free men were allowed to bear arms, and only certain officers among them wore marks of distinction. Among these marks were the belt from left to right called the bend in heraldry; the cross-belt, denoted by the name, saltire; the cross, an emblem of Christianity. An officer of a rank above him who wore the saltire wore a cloak open in front, this obscured the upper part of the saltire leaving the inverted vee or chevron exposed to view; the border, belt or fesse, was another. It must be understood that these indications of military rank were very highly prized. Very frequently the emblem and color of the nationality of the bearer was added, like bearing a fesse on a shield between three lions arranged two above and one below the fesse, the shield being one color, the fesse another, the lions yet a third.

The origin of the word coat-of-arms is from the French, Côte d'arms, side of arms, or side armor, where the symbols were emblazoned.

Apart from the bearing of arms, which in itself was a most honorable distinction, not only testifying to the rank of the original founder of the family but also to its present character — for no dishonorable family was permitted to bear arms — certain other figures were added to the heraldry of different nations of general significance. The falcon, the hunting-horn and the dog evidenced a certain rank and wealth. A family must possess large landed estates in order to have a hunting park, and it is that which these emblems signify — the rights of chase or warren. This refers especially to the Thurston family wherein whose arms the hunting-horn and falcon predominate, especially in the arms of Thurston of Hoxon, Thurston of Cranbrook, Thurston of Norwich, of Charles Myrick Thurston and of John B. Thurston. John Thurston, sheriff of London, 1516, apart from bearing a falcon on a canton, bore also, among other devices, three escallops or pilgrim-shells, which travelers to the Holy Land were wont to assume in their arms. The shield of Thurston of Thurston, 1575, denotes majestracy on account of the ermine background on which the griffins' heads are set.

Now while individuals, originally, took arms which described the rank either of an ancestor or of their own, the exact meaning of the various symbols fell into confusion, in later days, on account of families assuming and obtaining grant of arms whose symbols were chosen at will, rather than determined by the station or rank of the family. There are, however, exceptions. In the arms of the Herschel family are to be seen the telescope of the astronomer. In the arms of a certain French family ennobled by Napoleon I on account of the heroic attendance of the founder of the family, who was a surgeon in the Egyptian division of the army, are to be seen a pyramid, a camel, a palm tree and a surgeon's scalpel, all associated with the event the arms commemorated.

But while families were allowed the choice of symbols, sometimes, yet the nationality of a family coat-of-arms could be determined only by the manner and form of the emblazonment, even this with the relaxation of heraldic laws became impossible after a while to be determined except in the case when the family was a titled one and bore a coronet in the arms. The English, Scottish and Irish coronet to denote the rank of earl has five points visible, the French coronet to denote a corresponding rank, which is that of count, has seven, the English viscount's coronet is surrounded by a row of pearls, the French viscount's coronet has a fleur-de-lis in front and half-seen on each side, while there is a jeweled point between each fleur-de-lis.

There have been some efforts made to nationalize the heraldry in America which had already been introduced by the leading families from Europe. The Aryan Order of the Holy Roman Empire in America conceived in 1798, fallen into abeyance in 1830, and organized fully on a new basis in 1879, open to the descendants of 1st, families descended from colonial officers of royal commission, civil or military; 2d, families of European knighthood and nobility settled in America, and 3d, families of European officers settled in America, of royal commission, and tracing to gentry or nobility in Europe, this order by emblazoning the arms of the above families of its members on the breast of the two-headed eagle gives at once the requisite national characteristic, while every one is at once assured of the standing and character of the families thus designated.

DICTIONARY OF HERALDIC TERMS USED IN THE VARIOUS THURSTON ARMS.

Chevron — an inverted vee [Λ] on lower half of cross belt.
Hunting horn — symbol of the right of warren or chase.
Ostrich feathers — emblem of affluence.
Demi-griffin, half-griffin — the griffin being a fabulous animal with lion's body and eagle's head and wings, signifies strength and swiftness.
Of the field — means of the color of the shield or field.

Or — gold.
Argent — silver.
Gules — red.
Vert — green.
Azure — blue.
Sable — black.
Proper — after nature.
Mullets — stars.
Volant — flying.
Vulned — wounded.
Passant — in the act of walking.
Guardant — looking at the beholder.
Canton — a small square division of the shield.
Martlets — a small bird, a martin or sparrow.
Cinqfoils — a five leaved flower.
Bar — a narrow band drawn across shield horizontally.
Third — means the third color mentioned.
Last — means the last color mentioned.
Escallops — pilgrim's shells.

NATIONAL THURSTON GATHERING.

The Thurstons of the United States held a two days' meeting at Newburyport, Mass, June 24, 25, 1885. It was well attended and an occasion of great interest. They visited the spot where the first Daniel Thurston settled in Newbury, had formal addresses by Hon. Ariel Standish Thurston of Elmira, N. Y., Brown Thurston of Portland, Me., Rev. James Thurston of Dover, N. H., Rev. Richard B. Thurston of Stamford, Conn., Rev. Philander Thurston of Sutton, Mass., a poem by George Henry Thurston of Pittsburg, Pa.

Rev. R. B. Thurston said in a communication to the Congregationalist regarding this gathering:

The impressions there made on many minds seem to me to render the occasion worthy of note in the current records of the times. The modern press contains a vast amount of matter concerning the different classes of society and their relations to each other; a great deal, also, concerning individuality and personal relations. For this reason, it may be all the more pertinent to call attention to family relationships, lest on the one hand or the other, we should miss a part of the thought of the Creator, who has been pleased to "set the children of men in families."

Some are ready to ask in view of a family meeting or reunion, the old question "Cui Bono?" liberally translated, "What is the use of it?" We are persuaded there is no difficulty in reaching a sensible and logical reply; but to persons who have in their own constitutional endowments and affectionate dispositions a capacity for what is called sometimes, "sentiment," who appreciate and honor domestic ties—to such persons the shortest, best answer will be, "Come and see;" try it at the first opportunity. "Blood is richer than water!" and "a strain" of good family blood will vindicate itself even in remote degrees of cousinship.

For the recent meetings at Newburyport, the first of the kind of our name, the members of the clan are chiefly, if not solely, indebted to the zeal of Mr. Brown Thurston of Portland, Maine, son of the late Dr. David Thurston, long known as a Father in the churches of that state, a President of the A. M. A., a noble-hearted man who cared for his ancestry and his posterity, and transmitted that care to his children The son in the midst of an active business life has spent much time and labor in researches as the genealogist of the family name, with no reward except the grateful appreciation of his efforts, which has lately found warm expression.

The call was national. Nearly one hundred names were registered of those who had responded by their presence, representing nine states. Letters were received from several other states, one of them Alabama, another Nebraska, testifying to deep interest in the meeting, the last especially, from a business man setting forth with affectionateness and eloquence strong considerations for cherishing kindred ties, as a defense and aid of virtue and character.

We met for the most part as strangers. One who came six hundred miles, bringing his wife and daughter, had seen but one person of the name in nearly fifty years. We had much enjoyment in our two days' intercourse. We parted as friends and kindred, perhaps also quite sufficiently as a mutual Admiration Society; for we learned much of good and little of ill of one another. We grew in honor of the name.

The first afternoon was spent in a visit of the whole company to the plot of ground granted by the town of Newbury in 1638, to Daniel Thurston for a homestead. From that hilltop we looked over the ocean eastward, which the pilgrim ships had crossed, bearing our fathers. We talked of what had been, and turned our thoughts westward to their sons, who are planting new roots of the old vine on the Pacific coast. The last afternoon was set apart for a family collation, with toasts and responses, singing and farewells.

Near the close a clergyman of New Hampshire, remarked that the whole occasion had deepened the conviction that the family is the true unit of society. Another suggested that the old Jewish characteristic of preserving carefully the family genealogy, had not exhausted its purpose or virtue when Christ came, but is an element of the human constitution at its best, and still to be cherished.

It is proper to add that though called as a social, not a religious assembly, though much humorous expression was had, yet a high, moral tone, a reverent and ever devout feeling seemed to run spontaneously through the course of varied exercises. At the close of the evening meeting the family sung with pleasant effect the children's evening hymn "Now I lay me down to sleep."

I make a few extracts from some of the addresses. The following are extracts from the opening address by Hon. A. S. Thurston.

The coming to New England of such men as John Winthrop and his associates induced a large emigration of substantial people of the better class to follow his example, so that as stated by Hutchinson, by the year 1640, when emigration partially fell off, some four thousand families, and twenty thousand souls had come to New England to inhabit.

Among the emigrants to this country during that period were several bearing the name of Thurston. Of the emigration of one of that name we have a record with the time of his embarkation. John Thurston, a carpenter, aged 36, with his wife Margaret aged 32, were passengers on the Mary Ann, William Goose, Master, who sailed on May 10th, 1637, from the port of Yarmouth, the same port from which Winthrop embarked. On the same ship with him was Abraham Tappan, who settled in Newbury. This man was doubtless the same John Thurston who was received into the church in Dedham six years after, viz.: in 1643, although Savage in a letter to me thinks there was another John who had a grant of land in Salem in 1638. But I incline to the belief that there was only one John, and that he disposed of his grant of land in Salem, and removed to Dedham where he united with the church in 1643.

Twenty years after there was a Thomas Thurston who in 1656 was imprisoned in the common jail in Boston with his associates William Brand, Christopher Holder and John Copeland, for the crime of belonging to the sect called Quakers. For the same offense the two latter lost their right ears and were severely whipped and ordered back to England, and the magistrates of Boston, because Robert Look, the master of the ship that brought them over, refused to give bonds that he would carry them back, was by the magistrates of Boston committed to prison. So says the historian Charles W. Elliott.

Edward Thurston, another Quaker, of the time of whose coming to this country we have no record, but which must have been prior to 1647, because his marriage occurred in June of that year, took the precaution to settle in the more tolerant and liberal state of Rhode Island, where Quakers as well as Baptists could enjoy more freedom to worship God, according to the dictates of their own consciences.

Of Charles Thurston, whose name is said by Savage to be found in the Plymouth records as early as 1643, we have no further knowledge.

It is the currently received opinion that the two early settlers in Newbury by the name of Thurston were nephew and uncle, both named Daniel. That they must have come to Newbury in or prior to 1638, is very evident, as upon the town record this entry appears: "24 Nov., 1638, there was granted unto Daniel Thurston an house lot on the Neck over the great river of four acres next to John Osgood." This John Osgood was from Andover in Hampshire, England, but this in no manner indicates the birthplace of his neighbor Thurston.

Savage says that Daniel Thurston, the uncle, married on the 29th day of August, 1648, Ann Lightfoot, the widow of Francis Lightfoot, of the town of Lynn, as his second wife, his first wife having died May 25, 1648. As this couple had no children they probably adopted the nephew Daniel junior, to whom the elder Daniel by his will, in 1665, devised all his property after the death of his wife, calling him in the will my "kinsman." And now the question arises, how do we know that the relation of nephew and uncle subsisted between these two Daniels? It is only I believe from an ancient petition relating to the militia, to which petition objection was made that some who signed it were boys, and in a remonstrance enumerating some of the disabilities of the signers it is said "Young Daniel Thurston is under his uncle." This would fully establish that relationship in a court of law, there being no others of the name of Thurston at that time in the town of Newbury. Daniel Thurston "the kinsman," as we may call him, from whom your speaker is descended, was, as appears from the town records of Newbury, married October 20, 1655, to Ann Pell, supposed by Savage to have been a daughter of Joseph Pell, of the town of Lynn, from which town, as I have stated, Daniel the elder married his wife, Ann Lightfoot, a circumstance which adds probability to Savage's conjecture.

These three English emigrants, Edward, John, and Daniel Thurston, must have landed on these shores between 1635, the first year of the settlement of Newbury, and 1647, the year in which Edward married the Quakeress Elizabeth, the daughter of Adam Mott, who was six years old when she came with her father from Cambridge in England.

We don't know that these three Thurstons bore any relationship to each other, much less that they were the traditional "three brothers," although there is a probability that John and Daniel may have been related.

The Newbury Thurstons perhaps were weavers, for the "kinsman" bequeathed in his will to his sons Joseph and Stephen "looms and the tackling belonging to the same." The "kinsman" was, however, a military man. He bequeathed to his son James his pistols and his houlsters, to his son Joseph a gun and to his son Stephen his carbine. He was a soldier in King Philip's war in 1675, a trooper in Capt. Appleton's company. Eight of the "kinsman's" descendants were soldiers in all the various wars prior to that of the rebellion. Sergt. Oliver Thurston was with Sullivan in his expedition against the six nations, and was wounded at the battle of Newtown, an engagement which took place six miles from my present residence.

In regard to John of Dedham, he was evidently a man of public spirit, and had an appreciation of the advantages of an education, for it is recorded of him in 1644, that he took part in a public meeting to provide some means for the education of youth. Of his four sons, two were members of the Colonial Legislature, and his youngest son was one of the founders of the Old South Church in Boston. Another son, Joseph, who moved to Long Island, was one of the twenty-four persons to purchase a parsonage for the pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Jamaica, L. I. Edward, the Quaker, was also, as were his children, men of education. He was, says the record preserved by the society of friends at Newport, a commissioner assistant and deputy from Newport for many years.

And now I think I hear some one, professing more wisdom than we profess, asking the question why this assemblage of people should come from distant points, to a symposium over the dry bones of their ancestors, or should engage in anything so supremely childish. In other words what earthly benefit is there to be derived from genealogical researches of this character. My answer is, that if there are no possible benefits to be derived from these studies, there is much positive satisfaction and enjoyment to be derived from them. I speak from experience when I say that I have beguiled many an otherwise tedious hour, in tracing out the history of my progenitors; and so much does the passion grow by what it feeds upon, that one becomes intensely interested in the history of families other than his own; and in tracing out and studying the history of families we very necessarily become interested in events, incidents, and achievements connected with the individual members of such families. In that way one becomes interested in the study of history, and historical events become indelibly and firmly fixed in the mind.

When I learn that one of my ancestors was a soldier in the war of King Philip, or in Sullivan's campaign against the six nations, I do not rest satisfied till I have informed myself in regard to all events within my reach touching the main incidents of that war and that campaign. Thus I learn history. When I find that Daniel Thurston the "kinsman" paid an onerous tax under the administration of Governor Andross, I become interested in all I can find respecting his administration, how he came to be clothed with arbitrary powers and how restive the people became under his tyrannical sway.

To preserve the memory of our ancestors is one of the marks of a high state of civilization. Among enlightened people if a child is born a record is made of it. A man dies, the fact is set down with day and date in a public register. In this way men may trace the history of families and individuals. Among barbarians no such records are kept. Hence, too, among all enlightened people monuments are reared, and the chisel of the sculptor and the palette of the painter are put in requisition to hand down to posterity the forms and features of the departed.

From the address of Brown Thurston, on the history of the Thurston Genealogies.

Genealogy is of ancient origin and needs no defense from me in these days of enlightenment and progress. It was not beneath the consideration of the Creator of man, who as the author of the Book of books, very carefully instructed the writer of the book of Genesis to record the genealogy of Noah and to give all the facts that made it necessary to so effectually wipe out that generation of man from the earth; and with equal care to record the virtues that saved his own family from the same destruction. There was doubtless a reason for this more weighty than merely recording the historical fact of the flood. And who can doubt that reason was to warn the sons of Noah and their posterity against the sins which had brought ruin upon their contemporaries, and at the same time to encourage them to expect blessings and substantial favors from the Almighty if they honored him and lived virtuously.

This example has from that time to this been regarded by those who have thought most of family and character, as a sacred duty, to warn against the errors and sins of the fathers, and to keep alive the fragrance of the good deeds done as lessons for those who should come after.

These reflections lead me to consider what are the requisitions that should govern the historian of families. First, and most important is accuracy. Assume nothing. Prove by indisputable evidence everything, so that dates and transmissions shall be unquestionable.

The pedigree being established, the next essentials are, the character, religion, and aims in life. They are what give interest, and make the record of real value to posterity. The temptation is strong to record only that which is meritorous and praiseworthy, and to drop the names of those who have turned into evil paths. But it seems to me that, especially in the light of our divine example, the highest type of genealogy is that which records all characters faithfully, be they good or bad. The careful student will not fail to perceive that the practice of virtue, honor, and reverence to God, tends to happiness, elevation and enlargement; while the practice of evil courses tends to degradation, woe and diminution.

Burke says "Those only deserve to be remembered who treasure up the history of their ancestry." The work under consideration has grown from the desire of a few to perpetuate the remembrance of their immediate ancestry, and is found within the narrow limits of less than half a score of names. Rev. David Thurston, D.D., of Winthrop, Maine; Hon. Ariel Standish Thurston of Elmira, N. Y.; Rev. James Thurston of Newton, Mass.; Frederick George Thurston of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Charles Myric Thurston of New Rochelle, N. Y.; Samuel David Thurston of Camden, Ohio, are the principal ones whose careful and thorough work laid the foundation that made it possible to make the genealogy what it is in its earlier part. Their work came into my hands in 1875, and I immediately set about collecting other records from every individual of the name that could be found. To get names I had recourse to the directories published in the various cities in this country. This was the most prolific source, but they only gave the names of those who lived in the cities, while the larger part of the persons sought would be found in the country. By correspondence with those in the cities the names and address of their relatives in the country were obtained, and I followed up every name and every connection of the name that came to my knowledge. From the lists of towns, counties and parishes in the country, I discovered some of each named Thurston, and immediately wrote to some one I thought could give me the origin of such name. If I found the given name of Thurston attached to any one, I at once wrote to ascertain how he came by the name, and occasionally drifted upon a rich mine of information. More than a hundred town and probate records, old family bibles, and the memories of old people, were fruitful sources of information and have contributed much to the stock of names, dates and facts.

After pursuing this course for about four years, I had accumulated a vast amount of statistics, and as there seemed to be but little new information, coming to me, I set about the printing, and in April, 1880, issued the volume of "THURSTON GENEALOGIES." During the progress of the work of printing I sent many proof sheets to parties interested, which had the effect to stir up a new interest, which brought new facts and enabled me to connect some families which I had not been able to do previously.

I am not ashamed of the work done, for I have faithfully labored for the best and most perfect attainable, but can heartily adopt the language of Rev. Dr. Samuel Miller of Princeton Theological Seminary, who said when eighty years of age, "I am ashamed that the business of genealogy has in times past engaged so little of my attention; and that now when I see so much of its real value, a great deal truly interesting to me has irrevocably gone." If I had taken the same interest in the subject when a young man as now I could have secured a thousand facts, many of them quite essential to the completeness of the record, which today are beyond the reach of human knowledge and power to obtain.

During the progress of my investigations I was very strongly impressed with the belief that those families in the volume under the headings of John of Dedham and Moses of Hollis were connected with the family of Daniel of Newbury, with whose name I commenced the records. Since the volume was issued I have ascertained the parentage of Moses of Hollis and can now place him in his proper relation to the others, as a descendant of Daniel of Newbury.

Soon after issuing the Thurston genealogies in 1880 I received a letter from a lady whose grandfather was a Thurston of the John of Dedham family, saying, the portrait of my father in the book was so much like her grandfather that she should think it might have been taken for him. Several others of the same family have written me that some portrait in my family strongly resembled some of theirs. This led me when sending out circulars, to insert in them a request for photographs, so that I might compare faces on a larger scale. In response to this I have received a large number of photos. From a critical examination of these I think any one will be led to believe that John of Dedham was related by kinship to Daniel of Newbury. The correspondence of given names prevailing in these two families, as well as the moral and religious characteristics are also very striking. The accounts and records of Thurstons in the mother country come almost entirely from the counties in the south and east of England. I have the genealogy of Richard Thurston of Challock, England, whose will is dated September 13, 1474, down to Robert Thurston who died in December, 1636, the prevailing given names in which correspond with the leading names among the families of Daniel and John Thurston in this country. The evidences of connection are so strong that, although I have not been able to prove it by recorded descent, I am firmly of the opinion that they both belonged to the same family, and that they of England just alluded to are of the same stock with those who first visited these American shores.

There has been no time since the book was issued that I have not been quite industriously engaged in looking up the families that were not fully reported, and in trying to trace down to the present time the descendants of many whose record was quite full up to about the first of this century, but since that time have been lost to view. Many of these I have been successful in getting, and every new move brings others to light. The notices the papers in the different parts of the country have given of this gathering have brought numerous letters to me from descendants of those I had failed to reach before, and enables me to complete records heretofore altogether unattainable. I have sent the printed records of a great many families, to some of their descendants in order to excite an interest sufficient to get the records that were lacking, and have written out the ancestry of a great many others, for the same purpose, and in this way have succeeded, after repeated efforts in some cases, in securing the required facts.

One of the leading elements of my pleasure and satisfaction in this work has been that I find the great mass of those of our name, and a host of their descendants bearing other names, are so respectable; so love the ways of virtue, of religion, and of every good cause. Not more than half a dozen isolated cases of heresy and corruption have been found, and not one of these where the name as a whole, or even a family is compromised. There is a characteristic enterprise in business; a public spirit in all that tends to elevate, improve and enlarge the man, pervading them which is quite charming, and gives me enthusiasm in the work; and hope that the good deeds and noble aspirations of so many of the names recorded may be an incentive and an inspiration to those who come after to aspire to even higher moral elevation, and to greater strides of enterprise than their fathers attained.

From the address of Rev. Philander Thurston, on Natural Characteristics of Thurstons.

From my acquaintance and observation, two classes or conditions appear. One class is rather short, below the medium height, thick set, rotund, even portly and fair. Their eyes are blue, or quite dark; their hair is light, or very dark, with corresponding complexion. They have small hands and are very jolly and look as though they would enjoy to take life easily. Yet they are industrious and very comfortable livers and a good hearted people. How much their physique has been modified by inheritance of the mothers, who were not Thurstons, is impossible for me to determine. They may be largely indebted to the mothers for their bodily type. I more than half think they are, for those of the other class of Thurstons are tall, straight, slim, gaunt, broad-shouldered, thin-faced, awkward, ungainly fellows; a genuine specimen of which is before you, save his nose, depressed eyes and thin hair (or rather he has grown up through it) which are like his mother's. He otherwise is a real, full-blooded Thurston. They usually have high foreheads, heavy hair, running from light to black; eyes, dark grey, hazel and black; large, long nose and ears of good size and becoming proportion; brawny hands, sturdy muscles and big understandings. And they like to stand on their own understandings.

They have been and are very largely farmers, although enough of them have been mechanics, artisans, teachers, lawyers, doctors, judges, ministers, missionaries and in various other honorable callings in life to save them from the charge of inability to fill acceptably any positions of trust and honor, which are in the gift of our churches, states and nation to bestow.

One marked trait of theirs is honesty. I have never known a dishonest Thurston. They stick to facts and care less for theories. They care little or nothing about rumors, or reports concerning themselves or others. "They say" has little weight with them, and the glib "everybody says so" falls to the ground. What they wish to know in any case is the truth. What is the true character of the man and what is the real thing constitute the sum and substance of their earnest inquiry. They are matter of fact people. They trust others and believe in their integrity, until the opposite is discovered and satisfactorily proved. Then the game is up once and for all.

They are positive and decided. They have their own convictions of right and wrong and are ready to stand by them and defend them if need be. They will dare and sacrifice in maintaining them. If I may be pardoned for the allusion, my honored father was a man of this stamp. When a member of the House of Representatives of this Commonwealth, he lay sick of a fever. The people had failed to elect a governor of the state. The election was consequently transferred to the House. There had been a tie in the House on an election to that office. Appeals were made to him to cast his vote. But his physician gave the emphatic no. To go to the House would endanger his life. Day after day the tie continued. At length another appeal came, and in the face of the protesting physician he said: "I will go, die or live." He was accordingly carried on his bed to a hack and thence to the State House, where he was lifted from his couch and deposited the vote that elected Marcus Morton governor. Of this, there is in the family abundant documentary evidence. And is it strange that if he inherited, that he should impart positive conviction; this live-or-die determination? Such decision and determination are in the blood of Thurstons and are thoroughly ingrained in their very being and constitution, and they will neither rub out nor wear out.

Yet with all this fund of sterling conviction and determination, they are kind and sympathetic. Their eyes quickly moisten at the sight of pain, sorrow and woe. Their pity shows itself in doing to the last for those in want. This doing however is quiet and undemonstrative. Those receiving learn the first and know the last of it. They will do it at the cost of self-denial. One of them greatly dislikes to attend a funeral, or view a corpse, and yet, when duty demands, he ignores all personal preference and will robe the body for burial and help bear it to its last resting place. The feeling of generous sympathy, pity, and conviction of duty, overcomes obstacles and makes them tender and helpful to those in need. Such is their kindness with fidelity.

They are temperate, and I believe they are temperate in all things. I once heard of a Thurston of whom, "they said," he sometimes drank too much. But I never saw it and did not believe it. It must have been a mistake! For they never drink too much. No, sir!! They are temperate people. They believe in temperance and they practice it; and thus quietly advocate it. And if all people would as silently adopt Paul's simple rule of "Touch not, taste not, handle not," they would be temperate and have a universal cure for intemperance.

They, as a rule, are frugal and thrifty though few, if any, of them have ever become distinguished for wealth. Yet they are solid, substantial people. They believe in making their own living and in cutting their own way in life by honest means and measures; and, as such, are God's husbandry, God's nobility.

I would like to give all the proceedings and addresses of this occasion, but my space will not allow and will close by giving two of the toasts and responses. The first was "Thurston gathering; the first and future gatherings," responded to by Rev. Philander Thurston.

Ladies and Gentlemen.

I feel a great deal. I am really too full for utterance! (as may be seen by these empty plates and pile of chips!!) This is an unfortunate and most incongruous arrangement to fill a man chuck full and then expect him to speak! It is too bad!!

But for a moment of sober earnest thought. I heartily rejoice in this first national gathering of Thurstons, in this first opportunity of looking one another in the face with cordial greetings and mutual conversation respecting our ancestors and for getting bearings for our future ot life in this dear country.

When Deacon Brown Thurston of Portland, to whom we are all so much indebted for this pleasure of being together and whose sickness and consequent absence we all so much deplore, first wrote me, some ten or twelve years ago, inquiring about me and my ancestors, I would not then have given a fig, nor have snapped my finger to know who my great grandfather was, nor whence he came, or whether I ever had such an ancestor. But in the progress of years and the somewhat extensive research, instituted and encouraged by his persistent effort and zealous inquiry, I have become more intensely interested than ever I was in boyhood in any novel or tales of Indians. I would now give almost anything in my possession to be able to determine exactly all about my great grandfather and all my progenitors. And this gathering of royal ones enlarges my desire in that direction. I would like to put more research and study upon this matter. The weeks and months of entirely gratis labor, put forth in this line, have but deepened my interest in the subject, which is greatly quickened by this national rally of the tribes. And I sincerely hope we all shall be led to double our diligence and energy in this respect.

Let us indeed on returning from this goodly meeting, search the records in the old family bibles, ransack the attics, overturn the old chests, haul out the antique and disused drawers and bring out their musty treasures and let them tell us of our ancestry, their whereabouts and doings. Gather and preserve every item, name, date, day, month and year of births, place, occupation, put them all carefully together and let them tell their own story. Let every Thurston become a detective and work up every cue, until the whole history is known and our lineage is made traceable and clear.

Let some one going to Europe look up the log books of the old ships, scan the probate records and the disused volumes of the libraries, until every vestige of this family history shall be known and secured.

To encourage, stimulate and even "provoke one another" in this patient and prolonged service, let us come together from time to time, as circumstances may favor and then and there compare notes, exchange happy greetings and go back to redoubled efforts and enthusiasm in the work. Do not forget, nor omit to send your gettings to Deacon Brown Thurston, who zealously collects and preserves all facts and items of this family genealogy with almost sacred fidelity and care. God bless him and all the tribe with long life, rich blessings and many future enlarged gatherings.

The second regular toast: "The Maidens of the Clan" was responded to by Rev. R. B. Thurston as follows:

The poet, Dryden, has left us this line: "Home is the sacred refuge of our life." The creatures below us in the scale of being can teach us that home is a refuge of life; but only for the human family is it "the sacred refuge." But what is home without a maiden there? I will speak a few words of response to the toast, in regard to our maidens as the light and joy of home.

When I was a student in Bowdoin College, the institution was under the presidency of a bachelor, not of domestic "Arts." John Pierpont came to deliver a commencement poem before the Phi Beta Kappa. His theme was "Improvement;" and an extended passage was devoted to the improvement of domestic relations. He closed a highly poetical panegyric of New England wives and mothers, with a strain for those in need, which the audience instinctively interpreted as a personal address to the President, of which the final words were: "Let him rise up and ask for one." I am sorry to add, the President did not take the Poet's advice.

Now I shall encourage those who need a home to "ask for one;" and here I may seem to speak to the absent rather than to those who are present; for the Thurston maidens do not make proposals; but we, ministers, often under the charge of speaking to the absent, do the best we can; for often they should be present; and in this instance I may perhaps say a word which by indirection may reach some for their profit, who are not here because they bear other names than ours.

When I was a child I was sent to a boarding and day school for young ladies. I had one companion who also had been put into trousers. We were tolerated there, I suppose, because of our insignificance. I stood in immense awe of those grown-up girls; and nothing did I dread more to meet than a platoon of young ladies. But the bashful boy afterward found courage to "ask for one," who still lives by my side; and since then I have not been afraid of the girls.

I might in various ways set forth the virtues and graces of the maidens of our clan For example, I know a man who had married a Thurston, who some years afterward, on an occasion when his wife departed to visit friends, wrote a letter to her before he slept dated "The day the sun went down," from which it is certainly within the bounds of a remote inference that she was the light of his home and his heart.

I could also speak of Thurstons, whom I have known, of whom I am sure it is no flattery to say, they would, if called to such spheres of social and public life, worthily adorn and ennoble the mansions of governors, or the White House at Washington.

But let us look at the names, and the import of those names which are favorites in the lineage of our families. They are significant of the womanly excellences which are manifest in the real life of those who bear them.

There is Anna, and Hannah, which is the same, meaning "Grace;" and we all know the persons true, endowed with graces of character and bearing, that make homes which are earnests of the mansions safe and unfading.

There is Alice, "All-ice" who refreshes us in the hot summer of life, cools the fevered brow and heart, and calms the inflamed and perturbed spirit.

Or are you of another temperament, and do you dread the wintry cold; we have Clara, "Bright," who fills the house with vivactity, warming and cheering as the glowing fire of an open hearthstone to the apartments.

Then follow Dora and Dorothea, no Pandora's box of evils, but precious gifts of God, names of sweet and hallowed memory in the circle here, inspiring grateful, tender thoughts in many hearts.

And next is Eunice, "Happy Victory." She is with us today, after many years of burdens and conflicts bravely and sweetly borne, crowned with the beauty of the hoary head, of unsubdued serenity and hope, happy victor indeed over time and circumstance. I see her still, the charm of my youth, the admiration of my age.

We have Mehitable, "Benefited of God," and of God made a benefit to many, full of love, and deeds of kindly ministering, who gained the confidence and love of step-daughters grown up, and filled nobly that position so often satirized, and sometimes most needful and usesul as well as most difficult, the position of a good second mother.

We have Sarah, "A princess," whose gifts of nature and grace rule with a benignant sway in the home life, who in her realm is a fulfillment of a Messianic promise, "Instead of thy fathers shall be thy children whom thou mayest make princes (and princesses) in all the earth."

There are other names to be numbered with those in equal honor; but time fails me to speak of them, save one, which should not be omitted, Mary, sweetest of names, and Marie and Maria, which are the same, "Star of the sea," name most honored of all, because of the Mother of our Lord; and as the Marys clustered about him, so are the Marys now a constellation of stars shining on our widespread sacred homes for Him who guides us over the troubled sea to happy landing on the shore of safety eternal.

Such are the maidens of our clan; and let none but one who is worthy, one who is the best style of man, who will Thurst-on for such a "sacred refuge," "rise up and ask for one."

THURSTON GENEALOGIES.

THE following letters from Sir John Bates Thurston of Thornbury, England, who has been for twenty-five years governor of the Fiji Islands, will be of special interest as giving fair grounds for belief that Daniel Thurston, the first of our name in this country who settled in Newbury, Mass., came from Gloucestershire, instead of Kent, as we thought probable when the first edition of this book was issued.

AWBRIDGE HOUSE, DUNBRIDGE, HANTS, ENG., Sept. 11, 1887.

MY DEAR SIR: — Your note dated Portland, Me., Aug. 20, and book of "Thurston Genealogies," arrived here in due course, and I beg that you will accept my thanks for your interesting contribution to the family history upon your side of the Atlantic. The volume is a marvel of industry and patience, and is now going the rounds of my family.

I am of the Gloucestershire Thurstons, a family you seem to have overlooked. We have occupied our present house and lands at Kington House, Thornbury, for over five hundred years, under existing titles, and traditionally for a much longer period. By tradition we come down from Turstinus filius Rolf (or Roles or Row), who carried, at the battle of Hastings, the standard presented to William of Normandy by the pope, and subsequently received large grants of lands situated in Gloucestershire and Somersetshire. The lands were "held of the king" (see Doomsday), and during the wars of the Barons I believe were confiscated, and we subsequently came into our own lands as copy-holders. I will give you further particulars by and by, for strangely enough I am writing a monograph on the family for the use of my children and the family generally.

You have touched upon some points also made use of, though in greater detail, by myself.

I incline to think that your Daniel Thurston, the datum point, as it were, of your survey, was not from Kent. There is nothing in your notes but conjecture upon this point. Now in the 17th century "Daniel" was a family name of the Gloucestershire Thurstons, and I observe that Richard Dole, a witness to Daniel Thurston's early will, was born in Thornbury about 1624. There may have been no connection, but it is possible and quite probable that both men were from Thornbury.

We have, I am told, in one of our huge old fireplaces, the initials D. T graved in the masonry. I shall look for it in a few days, when I leave this place for Gloucestershire. Daniel Thurston, a brother of my direct ancestor, went to Chefstow, and subsequently was lost sight of in the trouble of king and parliament.

Another of the family appears in our pedigree, thus — Nathaniel (went to America). There is no precise date of his going, but it was probably in the early part of the last century.

You refer to Thurston of Challock as resident in Kent as early as Edward iv, 1461, and extinct since 1622. There is a tombstone in Thornbury church now I regret to say covered by the organ, "Robert Thurston — Died ——, 1483," and the vaults below are full of the remains of his predecessors. He was one of my direct ancestors. We have never concerned ourselves with the Kentish name, for we are unquestionably the original, and — they are extinct.

There is extant an interesting letter from the Heralds office, certifying that Thurston of Hoxne had proved his claim to bear our arms. We were of the same family, but they are now extinct, or rather the male line ran out, and the last in the female line married, and the name was lost.

I will write to you again on this subject, and in the meantime, believe me,

Yours very faithfully,

JOHN BATES THURSTON.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE, FIJI, 25, 12, '88.

HON. ARIEL S. THURSTON, . . .

MY DEAR SIR:—Ever since meeting Professor Thurston and also a Virginia lady of the Thurston family at Washington, I have taken much interest in the American Thurstons. I have also learned to appreciate and admire the American people, and thoroughly reciprocate, as far as an individual can, the tender regard they have at heart for the old home of their sires. . . . . .

In Brown Thurston's Genealogy it is stated that there is nothing to connect your branch with the Kent Thurstons but the similarity of christian names, Richard and Daniel. The last Thurston of Challock was buried, I may note, in 1632.

The Kent historian writes, "The families of Gyles, Hawker and Thurston had continued intermarrying one with the other, as appears by their wills, all of whom have been removed from hence many years."

I do not think Daniel of Newbury came from Kent. Who were his closest friends? Two Gloucestershire (Thornbury) men. But in my family Richard and Daniel are family names. I should say, were, family names. Let me take the Norfolk branch, from whom I claim to descend. "In 1381 Edmund Gurney presented to this Church; in 1384, John Gurney; in 1387, William, the son of Richard Thurston, was lord, and in the year 1472 John Ovey of Worstead was lord of the manor of Thuxton or Thurston."

"This extract from the old historian, Bloomfield, indicates how in that troubled period manors were changing hands."

This Richard Thurston or Turston, or another of the same name and bearing the same arms, arrived about the same period in Gloucestershire. He was a follower of the Staffords. In 1399 he was lord of an ancient manor near Thornbury.

Beginning with Doomsday, the following is the history of the manor down to Richard Thurston's death in 1413.

Rudolph de Socin held Chemmguarde (now Chemywarde) in Wilday hundred and Roger holds it of him. There are 1500 acres. Bressman held it (13 temp. Ed. the Conf).

In demesne are 3 ploughs and 13 villiens, and 1 charterer with 6 plough cottages and 9 servii and ancilie, etc.

Edward Burner died seized of this manor 9 E. 1. Gilbert Chestelyne purchased a charter of free warren in Chemmguarde, 29 Ed. 3. Edward Stafford died seized of this manor 4 R. 1., as did Maria his widow, 1 H. 4, and Richard Turston, 1 Hen. 5.

The manor soon after came into the hands of the Greuils. The above manor lies within about seven miles of Thornbury.

The descendants of this Richard acquired by purchase or otherwise, "Kington," a part of the Duke of Buckingham's Thornbury manor. Richard not unfrequently appears as a family name, and in the 17th century, Daniel. If, therefore, similarity of names is worth anything, you may find it among the Gloucestershire Thurstons.

But now for another conjecture:—I have already pointed out that "Dole" might have been a friend because he was a fellow countryman, or even a fellow townsman, and so, I think, was Daniel's friend "Poore." Brown Thurston states that Poore came from Wiltshire, and so he might. But I say that he was a Thornbury man, notwithstanding, and hence the connection and friendship with your ancestor. Let me offer you the following from my note book, containing extracts from the parish Register of Thornbury:—

William Poore and Maud ——? married ye vi day of Feb., 1602.
John Poore was buried ye 29 Sep., 1623.
John Poore was bapsed ye 27 Feb., 1620.
Joan Thurston was baps ye 6 April 1623
Agnes Poore was buried 26 Sep., 1624.
Samuel Thurston was bap ye same day.
Thomas Dole was buried ye 16 May, 1628
Daniel Thurston was bap ye 4 Jan., 1643.
Daniel ye son of Dan' Thurston was bap 1 June, 1663.
Ed' the son of Daniel and Sarah his wife was bap ye 25 day Feb., 1674, and so on. . . .

By this you will observe that the Poores were, in the 17th century, like the Doles, a Thornbury family. You will also observe that Richard is a family name of the Gloucestershire Thurstons, and that Daniel was a christian name with them at about the same time your ancestor appears in America.

There were Daniels I know nothing of. In fact, I know nothing of a Daniel Thurston who was in charge of the estate of my ancestor, Nathaniel, during his minority. But from family papers I see that in 1665 and thereabouts Daniel paid "aid" and subsidies, and all other extortions for Nathaniel.

But again, how came your Daniel Thurston to have looms left him? Because in his day that part of Gloucestershire was celebrated for its cloth manufactures, and being familiar with this industry he provided himself with the very things a man in his position would want in a new country such as that to which he was going. . .

I think you may fairly assume that Dole and Poore were both Thornbury men. You may feel equally well assured that in 1600-1700 Daniel Thurstons were not singular in Thornbury. It was a name common to several branches of a large and particularly robust family, and you can draw your own conclusions as to the probable causes which brought a Daniel Thurston, a John Poore and a Richard Dole, into close neighborly relations at Newbury in the early days of Massachusetts' history. . . .

I am, my dear sir,
Faithfully yours,
JOHN BATES THURSTON.

P.S. We descend from Tursten fitz Rou le Blanc of Bec Crispin Normandy.

John Poor's lot and Daniel Thurston's "House lott" adjoin one another. The old Thurston house has been demolished and a new structure occupies its place. The old original house of John Poor is still standing, built in 1640, five years after the first settlement of Newbury. Richard Dole was a witness to the will of Daniel Thurston.

NOTE. — For the "history of the name," the "name in England," the "early settlers in the U. S."; extended notes concerning Daniel Thurston, the first settler of the name in Newbury, Mass., his will; concerning the "kinsman," his will; and other interesting suggestions concerning his location in England, see first edition, pp. 17-23.

Correct, in first edition, lines 20, 21, page 17, Fridthof should read Frithiof.

Page 18, line 27, should read king Edward in 975.

Line 28 should read Ethelred, 979 to 1013.

Thurstone was one of the first settlers of Chincoteague island, Accomac county, Va.

There is a well-authenticated tradition that Richard Thurston of Portsmouth, R. I., had a large family of children; that he was the first person to die there, and that his remains were carried by four of his sons on a litter, by a footpath, for fear of the Indians, nine miles thro the woods, and buried in the second Baptist burying-ground, in Newport, R. I., where there was a small settlement, as the only safe place.

POSTERITY OF DANIEL THURSTON.

First Generation.

DANIEL THURSTON,[1] the "kinsman," and probable ancestor of all the Newbury Thurstons, married, Oct. 20, 1655, ANNE PELL, a daughter, as Savage supposes, of Joseph Pell of Lynn, the same town whence came Ann Lightfoot, the wife of the elder Thurston, a circumstance adding probability to Savage's conjecture. He was a trooper in Captain Appleton's company, and was paid £4, 10s., June 24, 1676.* He died Feb. 19, 1693.

Children.

2 Daniel,[2] b. July 2, d. Nov. 3, 1657.
3+Hannah,[2] b. Jan. 20, 1659; m. Benjamin Pearson.
4 A daughter, b. Nov. 22, d. Dec. 16, 1660.
5+Daniel,[2] b. Dec. 18, 1661; m. Mary Dresser. see
6 Sarah,[2] b. Jan. 8, 1664; m. ———.
7 Stephen,[2] b. Oct. 25, 1665; d. soon.
8+Joseph,[2] b. Sept. 14, 1667; m. 1st, Mehitable Kimball; 2d, Elizabeth Woodbury.
9 Anne,[2] b. Sept. 6, 1669; d. soon.
10+James,[2] b. Sept. 24, 1670; m. Mary Pearson.
11 Stephen,[2] b. Oct. 25, 1672; d. soon.
12+Stephen,[2] b. Feb. 5, 1674; m. 1st, Mary ———; 2d, Sarah ———.
13+Abigail,[2] b. March 17, 1678; m. Joseph Chase.

Second Generation.

HANNAH THURSTON[2] (Daniel[1]), second child of the "kinsman" Daniel and Anne (Pell) Thurston of Newbury, Mass., born in Rowley, Jan. 20, 1659; married, Jan. 20, 1679-80, BENJAMIN PEARSON,† son of John and Dorcas Pearson of Rowley, Mass., born Feb. 1, 1658. He died June 16, 1731, aged 73. She died June 26, 1731, aged 72. He had a mill at Byfield, Mass., which he bought of Mr. Cheney. The ninth generation of Benjamin Pearsons lived there in 1869

Children.

14 Hannah (Pearson), b. April 5, 1681.

* For Daniel Thurston's will see 1st ed. p. 24.

† THE PEARSON FAMILY are probably of French origin. In the sixteenth century there were religious persecutions in the north of France. In Picardy there were sons of John and sons of Peter who were workers in wool; devout Christians, who fled across the channel.

15 Phebe (Pearson), b. July 14, 1682; m., 1702, Thomas Colman, b. in Newbury. They had:
16 Dorcas (Colman), b. April 27, 1703.
17 John (Colman), b. Mar. 8, 1704; m., Apr. 20, 1732, Ann Wicom.
18 Sarah (Colman), b. Sept. 16, 1706; died young.
19 Nathaniel (Colman), b. March 1, 1709.
20 Anna (Colman), m., May 15, 1733, Daniel Tenney of Bradford.
21 Jane (Colman), b. March 20, 1713.

Many of them were called "Pickards"; hence the names Pickard and Peirson, after that Person, and still later, Pearson. Colonial records spell the name Peirson, which is French for Peter's son.

I. DEA. JOHN PEARSON and wife Dorcas came from England to Ipswich, then to Rowley, Mass., in 1643, bringing with him machinery for a fulling mill, which was the first in this country. Supposing America had no wood that would stand water, he brought cedar posts also. Some of these posts were taken up about 1800, and found in a good state of preservation. He leased a grist mill of P. Nelson, which his son John subsequently bought. He was sent to the general court in 1678, and eight times after; was also selectman. In 1660 his tax was £1, 5s., 7d., and in 1691 it was £7, 15s., the highest but one in Rowley. He died 1693; she died 1703. They had: — 1. Mary, b. 1643; 2. JOHN; 3. Elizabeth, b. Oct., 1646, m., June 8, 1670, John, son of Michael Hopkinson; 4. Samuel, b. July, 1648. m., Dec. 6, 1670, Mary Poor, and lived in Haverhill, Mass., till the place was burned by the Indians, after which they lived in Newbury, Mass. She died at the birth of their daughter Mary, who married James Thurston [no. 10]; 5. Dorcas, b. 1650; 6. Mary, b. Feb. 1, 1652, married, 1671, Dea. Samuel Palmer; 7. Jeremiah, b. Oct., 1653, m. Priscilla Hazen, who died 1752, aged 88; he built a second mill in 1700, had ten children; 8. Sarah, b. May and died Oct., 1655; 9. Joseph, b. 1656, killed at Bloody Brook, Deerfield, Mass., in 1675, when seven hundred Indians attacked one hundred men, the flower of Essex county, and killed seventy-five; 10. Benjamin, m. Hannah Thurston [no. 3]; 11. Phebe, b. June, 1660, m. Dea. Timothy Harris [no. 157], who was representative to general court 1720-22, had mills in Rowley, ten children; Mrs. Dr. Joshua Jewett was his great-granddaughter and daughter of Eunice Thurston [no. 401]; 12. Stephen, b. 1663, m., 1684, Mary French, who died 1730; he died 1706; 13. Sarah, b. July, 1666, m., 1697, Jonathan Plummer.

II. CAPT. JOHN PEARSON, b. Dec. 22, 1644, m., Feb. 14, 1671, Mary, b. 1651, daughter of John Pickard; had a mill; d. Mar. 3, 1723; she died April 12, 1728. They had: — 1. John, b. 1674; 2. JOSEPH; 3. Dorcas, b. 1679; 4. Jane, b. 1684; 5. Hepzibah, b. 1689; 6. Rebecca, b. 1692-3.

III. JOSEPH PEARSON, b. 1677, m. Sarah Walker; had the Pearson homestead and a large landed property; lived in a garrison house, the walls filled in with brick; d. July 19, 1753. Children: — 1. Capt. JOHN; 2. Richard, b. 1705.

IV. CAPT. JOHN PEARSON, b. May 13, 1702, m., 1728, Ruth Hale, b. Nov. 17, 1706. He died Mar. 18, 1874. He was quite a musician; made a bass viol. His temperament was hasty; he had an idea at one time that a rogue was prowling about his premises. He slept at one end of a long chamber, and his bass viol hung at the other end. To be ready for the rogue he placed the ax near the bed. Awaking one night, the moon dimly revealing the instrument, which he supposed to be the rogue, forthwith sped the ax to its demolition. At one time he said, "When I was a boy we used to think a wooden trencher, with square corners, was good enough to eat from, then they thought it would look nicer to have the corners rounded; after awhile the trencher would no longer do, — they must have pewter dishes; next people became so smart nothing would do but earthenware. Lud, my wife, what is this world coming to?" In 1749 he built a substantial square house, with chimney in the center. This brought the fireplace in each of the four large rooms in the corner thereof. One could stand in the chimney corner of the kitchen, and look up to the sky. On one side of the turbaned iron dogs was a bench to sit upon, with the loggerhead hanging near; on the other side was the entrance to a large brick oven. Kitchen dressers were well-filled with shining pewter. The parlor was finished elaborately with wood paneling, and buffet in the corner, on whose carved shelves, displayed thro a glass door, were arranged divers articles of silver, china, glass, etc. One article was a quart silver tankard, within which, at his birth, was placed Joseph Pearson, who was the first Secretary of State of New Hampshire, and who afterward became a man of large size. The parlor paint was of a deep blue. DEA. RICHARD THURSTON[3] (Daniel,[2] Daniel[1]), brother of the preceding, and youngest child of Daniel and Mary (Dresser) Thurston of Newbury, Mass.; born there Oct. 16, 1710; married, May 5, 1731, MEHITABLE JEWETT, born July 19, 1710, only daughter of Rev. Jonathan Jewett, grandson of Maxamilion, who came from England in 1638. Upon the stones which mark their graves in Georgetown, Mass., is inscribed "Memento Mori. Erected in memory of Dea. Richard Thurston, who departed this life July the 12th, 1782, in the 72d year of his age." "Memento Mori. In memory of Mrs. Mehitable Thurston, relict of Dea. Richard Thurston, who died May the 18th, 1789, ætat 78 yrs., 9 mo., 10 d." In October, 1735, the throat distemper broke out in Rowley, and three deaths occurred at his house, Mary Jewett, probably a relative of his wife, Daniel and Thomas Thurston, probably sons of his brother Daniel, who had died fifteen years before. There were one hundred and ninety deaths from this cause in the town, one-eighth of the whole population. In a memorandum of deaths left by him he says, "My venerable grandfather Dresser died March 14, 1724, in his 85th year. My honored mother [i.e., his wife's mother], Mary Jewett, died Jan. 22, 1742, in the 63d year of her age. My honored father, Jonathan Jewett, died July 25, 1745, in his 67th year."

Dea. Richard Thurston† was a farmer in Rowley, now Georgetown, Mass.; was chosen deacon of the second church at its organization, Oct. 4, 1732. In his family devotions he was accustomed to use this petition, "That the Lord would be a God to him and his descendants to the latest generation, as long as the sun and moon endure." Rev. David Thurston, D.D., a grandson of Richard, said concerning these prayers, "They have been greatly blessed as regards their spiritual interests; quite a number are or have been deacons and deacons' wives, and ministers and ministers' wives." He was a captain of the "second foot company" of Rowley, June, 1757, and in that company were John Thurston and Stephen Thurston as privates. Benjamin Thurston was on Capt. Thurston's alarm list. In March,

DAVID THURSTON[4]† (Benjamin[3]), born July 9, 1736; married EUNICE WHITNEY. She died Jan. 5, 1802, aged 63. He died Aug. 6, 1826, aged 90 years, 28 days.

David Thurston lived in Leominster, Mass., several years, when he left, and was one of the first settlers in Marlboro, N. H., as early as 1775, near the Monadnoc mountains, when the township was almost an unbroken forest, subjecting them to great hardships. The catamounts, wolves, bears and wild turkeys were very numerous and troublesome, disturbing the slumbers of the night by their noise and search after sheep and fowls. It is said of Mrs. Thurston that she was particularly tough and smart, oftentimes walking long distances on snow-shoes in the care of her family. By a letter from his son David written to his sister Eunice (found 1878), he records that David Thurston (his father) went to live with him in Owego, N. Y., some years before his death, and that "he died sitting in his great chair, the place chosen by himself to die a few minutes before, and closing his own eyes passed away like one going into a gentle sleep." He was a member of the Presbyterian church, and to all appearances a sincere Christian. The following record is of interest:—

"Marlboro, N. H., July 9, 1776. We the subscribers do hereby solemnly engage and promise that we will, to the utmost of our powers, at the risk of our lives and fortunes, with ARMS oppose the hostile proceedings of the British Fleets and Armies against the United American colonies." Signed David Thurston, and forty-nine others.

SARAH THURSTON[4] (Richard,[3] Daniel,[2] Daniel[1]), sister of the preceding, and daughter of Richard and Mehitable (Jewett) Thurston of Rowley, Mass.; born there April 14, 1748; married, June 13, 1775, CAPT. JOHN PEARSON, born October, 1746 [see Pearson Family, p. 12]. He died Sept. 15, 1807; she died Apr. 28, 1818, aged 70.

Sarah Thurston and her sister Mehitable were married at the same time, Tuesday, before the battle of Bunker Hill, which was fought Saturday, June 17, 1775. Capt. Pearson had bright black eyes, clear complexion, and was very handsome; he was passionately fond of music, as he copied tunes which formed a thick book, and bound it in tin covers. It is now, 1879, in possession of Horatio Webster, Milton, Mass. He had the house built 1750, the fulling mill, and a farm in Rowley, Mass. The place is now, 1884, called Glen Mills. Mrs. C. M. Barnes says: "I very well remember my dear old grandmother sitting in the stuffed chair which was brought from England, and had under its cushion a box, in which it was said the Bible was hid in the days of persecution. There she sat, all her joints fixed except the neck, for I well remember she could shake her head at me when naughty. A peg was placed in her nearly closed hand on which was placed a handkerchief, that she could use by moving her head. Her little grandchildren would stand by her and turn the leaves of her Bible. Many were the lessons we received at her lips: the history of Elisha and the naughty children; a stitch in time saves nine; little children should be seen and not heard; 'Hark, from the tombs,' etc. She suffered thus for thirty years, and bore it with Christian resignation, tho a lady of great spirit and efficiency when well, as an old man once said to me, 'Your grandmother was a smart woman, rather high in the instep.'"

DAVID THURSTON[4] of North Sedgwick, Me. (Richard,[3] Daniel,[2] Daniel[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of Dea. Richard and Mehitable (Jewett) Thurston of Rowley, now Georgetown, Mass.; born there March 19, 1751; married, first, MARY BACON, born Aug. 18, 1750, only daughter of Rev. Jacob and Mary (Wood) Bacon * of Rowley. She died Oct. 21, 1790. Second, 1791, CHLOE REDINGTON, born May 11, 1767. She was a daughter of Abraham and Sarah (Kimball) Redington, who after Mr. Redington's death married Mr. Hook. Mr. Redington † was a farmer in Boxford, Mass. When Chloe was quite young he sold his farm and built a vessel in Haverhill. On the morning of his departure in this vessel he took his family, wife and six small children, into the front room, drew the shutters, and commended them all to God, then left never to return, the vessel and all on board being lost. Chloe's mother died in Newburyport, Sept. 28, 1823, aged 86 years, 9 months. While yet an infant Chloe was given by her mother to her aunt, Mrs. Rev. Jacob Bacon. After Mrs. Bacon's death, and when Mr. Thurston married her daughter, he took Chloe with his wife to their new home, which became her life home. Mr. Thurston often said "I brought my two wives home at once."

*THE BACON FAMILY. (More extended notice in 1st ed. p. 51.)

I. THOMAS BACON, born 1666. married Hannah Fales; she died April, 1711; he died April 11, 1749, aged 83. They had Thomas, d. 1784, aged 92; James, d. 1785, aged 85; JACOB; and Hannah, m. Nathaniel Wright, and d. Oct. 3, 1754; Mr. Wright d. April 3, 1755.

II. REV. JACOB BACON, born in Rowley, Mass., 1706, married, first, June 22, 1749, Mary Wood, born 1717; she died Nov. 17, 1772. Second, Mary Whitney. He died Aug. 14, 1787, aged 81; she died at David Thurston's in Sedgwick, Me., March 6, 1815, aged 87.

"My father's name was Abraham, and I believe Boxford was also his native place, as my grandfather Redington once resided in Boxford. I have seen the remains of his dwelling-place. I once saw my grandmother Redington when I was returning from the war of the Revolution. She then lived with her son Benjamin Redington, who lived in Lunenburg, Mass.; was, I think, over 90 years of age, was nearly blind, but had the use of her limbs, and, with a child to guide her, could walk quite spry; she appeared to be a very pious woman, gave me good advice, and admonished me to remember my Creator; her mind seemed to be bright and powerful. How long she survived after that I do not know, but think she lived some years.

"My father married Sarah Kimball of Boxford, the daughter of Dea. Aaron Kimball, by whom he had seven children, Thomas, Sarah, Asa, Aaron, Samuel, Chloe and Hepzibah. My sister Chloe married Mr. David Thurston of Rowley, who was then a widower, and by whom she had a numerous family of sons and daughters.

"My father settled in Boxford where all his children were born except the youngest, who was born in Haverhill. He built a vessel of about 50 or 60 tons, and went into the coasting business. He continued in this trade several years, when, returning from Sheepscot River with a load of wood, in the month of December, the vessel struck on a sandbar in the evening, and when the weather was very cold. She kept beating nearer the shore to a place called Squaw Harbor, near Cape Ann. The inhabitants seeing them from the shore collected and made fires, but the sea was so rough it seems they afforded them no relief. Fearing the vessel would go to pieces, they got into the boat and attempted to gain the shore; there were only three persons on board; the boat struck on the rocks and upset, my father and one man were drowned, the other man was saved. This took place so near the shore that my father took hold of a spar that was extended to his relief, but it was so covered with ice he lost his hold and perished. Had they remained on board they would probably have been saved, as the vessel was got off afterward, but little injured. When my father left the vessel he took with him a bag containing $900, a large sum for those days, which was lost. With his life he lost all his property, and my mother, who then lived in Haverhill, in a hired house, was left poor and destitute, with six small children, and another born a few weeks after my father's death. The children were dispersed among friends except the youngest."

David Thurston died in Sedgwick, Me., Aug. 26, 1821, aged 70; his wife died in Bucksport, where she spent the last few years of her life in the family of her daughter, Mrs. Blodget, Oct. 12, 1862, at the ripe old age of 95 years, 5 months, and was buried in Sedgwick.

David Thurston was a farmer in New Rowley* till 1795, when he made a prospecting journey to Maine on horseback, stopping at many places to see what advantages they offered, but with the resolution that he would not locate where there was no orthodox minister. In conversation with a gentleman in Bangor he said, "I have money in my pocket to buy this land," which included all that is now Bangor city, "but I will not settle where my family cannot have the gospel." So he went on forty miles to Sedgwick, where Rev. Daniel Merrill, a pupil of Dr. Spring, senior, was pastor of a Congregational church. Having purchased a farm he returned to Rowley, and in April, 1796, he took his son Richard and went to Sedgwick to sow and plant for the season, and then returned for his family, who took passage in a sloop from Newburyport to Bluehill Falls. There with four children, the oldest four years old, they were put into a boat and rowed four miles to the old saw-mill in the dead of night. Here they waited for the dawn. David and Richard came with an ox-team to take them to their new home, which was rough and not very clean. Some time after, a quantity of milk having been spilled, mother called to the maid, "Patty, Patty, I have found the floor." [This incident was related by one of the children.]

He was a man of commanding presence, nearly six feet high. He held the reins of government with a strong hand; exerted a molding influence on the character of his large family, so that not one fell into habits of vice. In his religion he was firmly orthodox, owning and studying such works as Edwards' and Hopkins'. He was constant in family worship, taught his children the Assembly's catechism, and so influenced them that they have all remained steadfast in the orthodox faith. He was selectman of Sedgwick and justice of the peace many years.†

Mrs. Chloe Thurston was a bright, sprightly woman, of great energy and endurance, and did a wonderful work in the care of a large family, for which they bless her memory.

MOSES THURSTON[4] of Hollis (Abner,[3] James,[2] Daniel[1]), son of Abner Thurston of Newbury, Mass.; born there 1721; married, first, HANNAH SEWALL; second, Dec. 18, 1777, CATHERINE EMERSON,* born Dec. 20, 1718, sister to Rev. Daniel Emerson, the first pastor of the Congregational church in Hollis. Moses Thurston died of apoplexy, while leading in prayer at a religious meeting, April 6, 1800, aged 79, and was buried in Hollis, as appears by his gravestone in the Central Hollis burying-ground, which has the following inscription upon it:

Mr. Moses Thurston
At a religious conference
April 6, 1800,
While addressing the throne of grace,
being fervently engaged was called into eternity and without struggle or groan resigned his spirit to God who gave it in his 80th year.

Could we but feel as he appeared
On Pisgah's top to stand,
We should not wish to tarry here,
But long for the promised land.

Mr. Thurston was a hatter; deacon in the Congregational church. He enlisted June 19, 1775, two days after the battle of Bunker Hill, in Capt. Reuben Dow's company. He enlisted again, June, 1777, in Capt. Daniel Emerson's company, raised for the defence of Ticonderoga. Hon. Samuel T. Worcester of Nashua, N. H., the historian of Hollis, informed me of the above facts in a letter dated April 1, 1879, and says, none of the name or family have lived in Hollis since my remembrance."

I have had laborious correspondence as to the ancestry of Moses Thurston of Hollis, and to gratify the curiosity of those descendants who have claimed a different paternity from that I give here, I insert the traditions and the manner by which I came to the truth. This book was first published in 1880, and Dec., 1882, I received from the town records of Westminster, Mass., the intention of marriage of his eldest son, as follows: — "Moses Thurston of Newbury, Mass., and Esther Bigelow of Westminster, were published Nov. 9, 1767."

There is a tradition in the family that Moses moved to Cohoes, N. Y., and came back to stay with his son Moses before he died, but I think this is unfounded. I get from three reliable sources the manner of his death, all of whom agree, but one says he died in Hollis and another that he died in Westminster. I am satisfied from all I can gather from the descendants knowing most about it, that he lived and died in Hollis. It was also said by another that he was translated, as Elijah the prophet was, and that his mantle fell upon his son Moses, who was a very devoted christian and deacon in the church at Westminster, Mass.

There is also a tradition that this Moses came from Canterbury in England, with two or

* THE EMERSON FAMILY.

I. THOMAS EMERSON of Ipswich, Mass., died May 1, 1666.

II. JOSEPH EMERSON of Mendon, Mass., died 1680.

III. PETER EMERSON of Reading, Mass., died 1751. Children: Anna, b. July 9, 1697, d. young; Elizabeth, b. Feb. 20, 1699; Anna, b. March 9, 1701, d. Feb. 15, 1788; Brown, b. April 16, 1704; Sarah, b. March 9, 1708; Jane, b. March 11, 1711; Mary, b. Dec. 20, 1713; Daniel, b. May 20, 1716, d. Sept. 30, 1801; CATHERINE, b. Dec. 20, 1718, m. 1st, in Hollis, February, 1745, Josiah Conant, who died in Hollis, Dec. 17, 1756; 2d, Dec. 18, 1777, Moses Thurston, as above. Peter Emerson had a brother Edward, whose son Joseph had a son William, who had a son William, who was the father of Ralph Waldo Emerson of literary fame.

three brothers, and that there were five generations back of him by the name of Moses, who were distinguished for their piety, and that some of them settled in Cohoes, N. Y. Miss Mary L. Chadwick of Jeffersonville, Vt., a great-granddaughter of Moses, says she has often heard her grandmother tell of going on horseback, sometimes two on one horse, the one behind on a pillion, to Cohoes to see her relatives. They carried their food in saddlebags, thrown across the back of the horses, and their clothing in a round valise strapped on to the back of the saddle. It may be these "relatives" were connected with her father, Chadwick, which under the circumstances seems to me more probable.

Rev. Joseph Fuller of Vershire, Vt., a grandson of Moses Thurston, seems to have more positive knowledge of the place where Moses Thurston came from to Hollis, than any other of the descendants I have found. He says in a letter dated June 25, 1879, "When Mr. Crocker married one of his [Moses] daughters, my mother visited them and spent some time with them. She also spent some eighteen months with an uncle of hers in Newburyport, Mass. She said of them 'they were grand folks.' Grandfather Moses Thurston used to visit us when he lived in Newbury, but it was before my remembrance, but who his father was I never knew. . . . I do not know the name of his first wife. My impression is she died in Newbury. This only I know, that my mother had kind, rich and genteel kinsfolk by the name of Thurston in Newburyport. . . . She was in Newburyport when about eighteen. . . . Pepperell, Mass., joins Hollis, and I remember hearing mother say that the farm on which they lived was on the line between the two towns—partly in Pepperell and partly in Hollis. The house stood in Pepperell, and the family record dates her birth in Pepperell; but they always attended church in Hollis, and I presume their civil relations were with Hollis." All this confirms me in the opinion that Moses was descended from Daniel Thurston of Newbury.

Dea. Richard Thurston [no. 49] of Rowley, Mass., owned land in Hollis, and several deeds are upon record from him to various persons in Hollis, but none that we can discover to Moses Thurston.

A letter came to my notice in 1884 which settles the question of the paternity of this Moses. It was written by Rev. James Thurston Dec. 23, 1860, in which he says, "Moses Thurston of Hollis was a brother of my grandfather James of Exeter, as my grandmother very distinctly informed me. So also was Peter of Lancaster."

Children.

He graduated from Dartmouth 1786, studied theology with Rev. Asa Burton, D.D., at Thetford, Vt., and was ordained pastor of the Congregational church in Vershire, Vt., Sept. 3, 1788, Dr. Burton preaching the sermon. He remained pastor there about thirty years, till his death, which occurred at the house of his brother, Dr. Fuller of New Haven, Vt., April 12, 1816; she died Oct. 29, 1856. They were both buried in Vershire. He was a man of good talents, a deep thinker, a close reasoner, thoroughly orthodox in belief, a faithful pastor, and an earnest and impressive preacher. He aimed not at elegance of style, or at popularity in any way, but to preach the pure gospel in the most impressive manner he possibly could, realizing his entire dependence upon God for success. He was distinguished for making himself understood and the force of his appeals felt. He labored amidst many discouragements, but not in vain. His labors abroad were highly appreciated. Several of his sermons were published. Under his instruction several young men received their theological training, and became highly esteemed preachers of the gospel. Children:

MOSES THURSTON[4] (Moses,[3] Stephen,[2] Daniel[1]), son of Moses and Sarah Thurston; born June 10, 1730; married, 1755, ELIZABETH CLIFFORD, born Aug. 12, 1735. He died Aug. 23, 1812, aged 82 y. 2 m. 2 d.; she died Dec. 24, 1817, aged 82 y. 4 m. 12 d.

In 1769 Moses Thurston, with John Ladd, commenced the settlement of Unity, N. H., as a farmer. Soon after they were destitute of food, and he went to Walpole barefoot, guided by spotted trees, bought two bushels of corn, had it ground, and carried it home, twenty-five miles, on his back. He said he never felt happier than when his family sat down to that meal of pudding and maple molasses. He was a man of iron frame and will. He officiated in all the town offices at different times. In the French and Indian war he was in Capt. John Allcock's company, Col. Peter Gilman's regiment, from Sept. 22 to Nov. 14, 1755. He was sergeant in a company of which Lieut.-Col. John Hart was captain, in Col. Nathaniel Meserve's regiment, from May 1 to Oct. 12, 1756. In an account of the sums paid by Capt. Samuel Leavitt, muster-master and paymaster of the forces raised out of Col. Atkinson's regiment for the Canada expedition, 1759, he enlisted March 25, and received 3£ 7s. 6d. He was in Capt. Jacob Tilton's company, Col. John Goffe's regiment, from April 26 to Nov. 27, 1860. We cannot ascertain how long he served as a private in the revolutionary army, but he was second lieutenant in company 5, Col. Benjamin Bellows' regiment, raised for the relief of Ticonderoga, the last of June, 1777; but as that fortress surrendered July 7, they arrived only in time to swell the army on its retreat. It appears from the "Report" that this regiment was not at the battle of Bennington, altho another one under the same colonel was there. War with France being anticipated, Gen. John Sullivan, then "president" of New Hampshire, gave Moses Thurston a commission as colonel March 9, 1787.

Children.

Daniel Thurston[4] (Nathaniel,[3] Stephen,[2] Daniel[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of Nathaniel and Miner (Chase) Thurston of Newbury, Mass.; born there Aug. 24, 1752, published May 30, married April, 1780, Hannah Hilton of Fitchburg, Mass. She died 1811; he died May 1, 1850, aged 97 y., 8 m., 17 days (on tombstone).

Mr. Thurston lived in Fitchburg till after the birth of his son Enoch, but probably very soon after that he moved to Windsor, Vt., where he remained till about 1787, when he removed to Scipio, Cayuga county, N. Y. Here his house and its contents, including his family records, were burned. In 1806 he purchased 700 acres of land of the Holland Co. in Aurora, N. Y., whither he migrated with two ox teams, erected a log house, and commenced life in what was then a dense forest, except about ten acres which had been cultivated by the Indians. Here they experienced all the hardships of pioneer life. Sometime after the death of his wife he took a horseback journey to Massachusetts to visit his mother, but she was not living. He was a deacon in the Baptist church in Scipio, but afterward changed his connection to the Universalist church in Aurora. He was a man of "good disposition and regular habits." He served in the revolutionary war, and as a substitute for his son Thomas in the war of 1812, and was at the burning of Buffalo, N. Y. His large farm was divided between his sons, Enoch giving $400 for his choice. He was a staunch Whig in politics. He spent the last days of his life with his son Thomas, and with him moved to Leoni, Jackson county, Mich., P. O., Grass Lake.

BENJAMIN THURSTON[5] (Benjamin,[4] John,[3] Daniel,[2] Daniel[1]), eldest child of Benjamin and Jane (McKnight) Thurston of Newbury, Mass.; born there Oct. 21, 1785; married, March 10, 1805, SUSAN HARDY of Ipswich, Mass. Both died in New Orleans, he Dec. 30, 1845, she Nov. 28, 1850, and both were buried in Madisonville, La.

Mr. Thurston was of Puritan stock, and maintained a high moral character through life; was always a courteous, kind-hearted and very benevolent gentleman, patient and considerate with his workmen, permitted no intemperance or profanity, and was looked up to for advice and counsel by all his neighbors. In a journal he kept we find:—"Feb. 6, 1808, paid my brother John Thurston the legacy due him at my father's decease, $201.83." "March 11, 1808, paid my mother Jane Thurston in part for her first legacy, due at my father's decease, $50." "June 12, 1808, Cash Dr. to Martha Thurston in part of John Thurston for the estate of my father, $60." "Received in full of Martha Thurston for the estate of my father, $64.62." Judith Thurston is also mentioned. "Jan. 22, 1808, paid Mark Creasy, collector for the town of Rowley for a land tax in said town, $3.54." "Mar. 28, 1808, paid Richard Coffin, collector for the town of Newbury, the tax on the estate for 1807, $24.62." He must have left Newbury about the last of 1814, as April 28, 1814, is the last date in this journal. The next trace we get of him he settled on the French Grant in Ohio, arriving there July 8, 1816. In 1818 he moved up the river onto a farm in Stoner's Creek, Lawrence Co., O., where was a fine mill privilege. He built a saw and grist mill, and was doing very well, but the care of the mills and the farm was too much for his health, and he was ill for a long time, and everything went wrong pecuniarily. There were but few settlers in that region, and school and social privileges were so small that it troubled him to have his children growing up without them. These circumstances decided him to move to Cincinnati. He was at Stoner's Creek Jan., 1824, and probably left about that time. In Cincinnati he found a cousin, David Thurston, Greenleaf Dole, and a cousin of his wife, all from Newbury. Here he kept his children at school till he moved to New Orleans, where he arrived Dec. 19, 1830, having left Cincinnati Oct. 21 before. June 27, 1831, he moved to Madisonville, St. Taminy parish, La. They were earnest Christian people of the Baptist faith. In Cincinnati and these places he was engaged in various business, and finally, commencing Jan. 1, 1838, kept the lighthouse at the mouth of the Tchefuncta river, on lake Ponchartrain. All their children were professors of religion.

She surrounded her home with rare flowers, and fine shrubs adorned its artistic landscapes. She lived upon lands owned by a long and distinguished line of ancestors, but who left the neighborhood of Spofford's hill about the close of the revolutionary war. She came to one of the old Thurston homesteads in 1819, and has resided near it ever since. We have known her from childhood, and can testify to her generous hospitality, suavity of manners and kindness of heart. She had uncommon literary ability, and retained her command of language and pen until within a very few years. She ably assisted Brown Thurston of Portland, Me., in his Genealogy, and did a deal of labor on the branches that have resided in Essex County. Four years ago she wrote for that record a sketch of her brother Nathaniel C., who was a soldier in the war of 1812, served in the battle of Tippecanoe, and was drowned in Lake Erie in 1820." DAVID THURSTON [5] (David,[4] Benjamin[3]), second son of David and Eunice (Whitney) Thurston of Marlboro, N. H.; born in Leominster, Mass., Oct. 17, 1768; married, 1808, FANNY DARLING, born Dec. 27, 1788, daughter of Rev. David and Esther (Metcalf) Darling of Keene, N. H. David Darling was born in Wrentham, Mass., Sept. 14, 1753. He pursued a collegiate course in Brown University, Providence, R. I. His class was ready to graduate when the British took the place and used the college buildings for barracks. The president of Yale invited the president of Brown to graduate his class there, which invitation was accepted. He afterward became the pastor of the Congregational church in Keene. Esther Metcalf, born Nov. 3, 1761, was a highly educated woman. Being associated with the college faculty she took the college course, and was prepared and ought to have graduated with the class, but was debarred from doing so by the customs of the times.

Mr. Thurston moved to Owego, N. Y., about 1812. He was a farmer, and died there Jan. 6, 1858; she died June 3, 1860. His daughter, Mary Almeda, says, "My father was a man of more than ordinary intelligence, a great reader, in physique faultless, tall, well-built, vigorous, and in perfect health till past the age of 70. Tho unfortunate financially, he was an honest man, a good father, and a christian. He and my mother were among the seven who united to form the first Methodist church in Owego. My mother was a superior woman, endowed with a superior mind, and tho her early advantages were limited, yet amid all her cares she never ceased her efforts for improvement, by reading, writing, etc., and her poetry has frequently graced the village papers. Her days were filled with usefulness, and she died respected by all who knew her. The children are all good-looking, good-sized, wide-awake, and it may be with aim in life too high to hit, but we are trying to make our mark."

THOMAS THURSTON[5] (Dea. John,[4] Jonathan,[3] Daniel,[2] Daniel[1]) son of Dea. John and Hepzibah (Burpee) Thurston of Rowley, now Georgetown, Mass., born Feb. 2, baptized Feb. 9, 1755; married first (published March 30, 1780), LYDIA DAVIS of Concord, Mass. she died Jan. 19, 1806. Second, Jan. 1, 1807, MEHITABLE UPTON born Nov. 6, 1763, daughter of William and Hannah (Stanley) Upton of North Reading, Mass.

He was a farmer in Fitchburg, Mass., and member of the Congregational church. Capt. Tom, as he was afterward familiarly called was a musical genius. He inherited superior talent, which, with some cultivation, made him the leading musician in town, in fact, in all this region. He had a good voice, a fine ear for music, and was leader of the church choir for over thirty years. His father, the himself a good singer, had no idea of allowing his son to depend upon his musical talent for a living, so he determined that Thomas should learn a trade, as was the custom in those days. Accordingly he apprenticed him to a shoemaker by the name of Brown in Concord, Mass. The trade was not adapted to his tastes; but he was remarkably successful teaching singing-schools, and he won a reputation in all the surrounding towns.*

Rev. Pearson Thurston[5] (Samuel,[4] Jonathan,[3] Daniel,[2] Daniel[1]), son of Samuel and Priscilla (Burpee) Thurston of Lancaster, Mass.; born there Dec. 9, 1763; married, 1794, Jerusha Greenleaf, born 1765, daughter of Samuel and Ann (Bradbury) Greenleaf (who were married May 17, 1749, she being eighteen years old) of Newburyport, Mass. Jerusha was a member of the Congregational church under the pastoral care of Rev. Samuel Spring, D.D., the father of Rev. Gardiner Spring, D.D., of New York city. She was an active christian, and retained her mental faculties and usefulness to the day of her death, which occurred suddenly, at Amherst, Mass., Dec. 10, 1834, to which place she removed three years previously. He died in Leominster, Mass., Aug. 15, 1819.

Pearson Thurston graduated at Dartmouth 1787, and studied theology with Rev. Nathaniel Emmons, D.D., the celebrated Hopkinsian theologian of Franklin, Mass., and with Rev. Samuel Spring, D.D., of Newburyport, Mass. He was ordained in Somersworth, N. H., Feb. 1, 1792, with a salary of $400 a year. He built a house there, thinking, as most Congregational clergymen of that day did, that he was settled for life; but in the extremely severe winter of 1812, in the absence of his wife, his house was burned, the family not even saving a suit of clothes each. The night was so cold that not a bucket of water could be obtained in the village.*

DEA. STEPHEN THURSTON[5] (Daniel,[4] Richard,[3] Daniel,[2] Daniel[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of Daniel and Judith (Chute) Thurston of Ipswich, Mass.; born in Rowley, Jan. 2, 1770; married, first, June 26, 1794, PHILOMELA PARISH, born Dec. 4, 1768, daughter of Elijah and Eunice (Foster) Parish of Windham, Ct. Her maternal grandmother was Hannah Foster, née Standish. Mrs. Thurston was only sister of Rev. Elijah Parish, D.D., of Byfield, Mass. Hannah Foster was great-granddaughter of Capt. Miles Standish of Plymouth colony. She died at Bedford, N. H., July 24, 1818. On account of the extreme heat she was buried the next day, and as was usual in those days a sermon was preached by Rev. Ephraim Bradford of New Boston, N. H., from Isa. 64: 4. Second, April 14, 1821, SARAH BURGE, born at Hollis, N. H., May 20, 1777, and died September, 1825. Third, Jan. 19, 1826, HANNAH WORCESTER,* born in Hollis, March 17, 1783, daughter of Capt. Noah Worcester. He died of cholera at Bedford, N. H., Sept. 13, 1833, and she married Jonathan Ireland of Dunbarton, and died in Elmira, N. Y., Dec. 28, 1871.

Mr. Thurston was a farmer in Rowley, then in Andover,† where he went Nov. 4, 1799, having united with the church the Sunday previous; after in Bedford, Mass., till 1809; after in Goffstown and Bedford, N. H.; deacon and elder in the Presbyterian church, the organizer of the first Sunday-school in Bedford, as well as the first temperance society; a strictly conscientious man.‡

Children, by first wife Philomela.

1144+ Philomela,[6] b. in Rowley, Mass., Apr. 11, 1795; m. Rev. Samuel Newell.

1145 Delia,[6] b. in Rowley Dec. 21, 1796; n.m.; d. at Bedford, N. H., Sept. 24, 1823.

1146 Clarissa,[6] b. in Andover, Mass., Feb. 26, 1801; met her death on Sunday morning, Jan. 6, 1884, being crushed by a moving train as she was attempting to cross the track of the Erie railway at 2d street in the city of Elmira, on her way to attend church. She had been a school teacher for upward of forty years, commencing at Goffstown. N. H., in 1818; next in Manchester, N. H. After that she went to what was then the province of Maine, and taught for one summer at Sunkhase on the Penobscot river. In 1821 she sailed for Savannah, Ga., and spent five years in teaching in that state; at Sandersville, Washington Co., in Columbia Co., at Eatonton, and at Covington; returned to her father's house in Bedford, N. H., in 1826, and in the winter of 1826 taught a school in Royalston, Mass. In 1827 she taught the female department of the academy in Prattsburg, Steuben Co., N. Y. She was vice-principal of the young ladies seminary in Geneva, N. Y., in 1831, and was connected many years with that quite famous institution, until in 1846 she founded the institution known as "The Elmira Ladies' Seminary," which became, and continued to be, one of the most celebrated schools in the state. As a teacher she attained great celebrity, having herself been educated at the school of Rev. Joseph Emerson at Byfield, Mass., from among whose pupils went out such distinguished educators as Miss Z. P. Grant and Miss Mary Lyon. Miss Thurston published several books of a religious character, which met with grateful acceptance from the public. Altho advanced in years she was vigorous and strong, and might fairly have counted upon living to a great age but for the fatal catastrophe that overtook her.

* For fuller account see 1st ed. p. 89.

† On p. 37, line 5, it was not Daniel, but his son Stephen, who moved to Andover.

daughter's in West Springfield, Mass., May 28, 1871, aged 85 years. Rev. David Thurston died at Litchfield Corner, Me., May 7, 1865.

Mrs. Thurston was a lady of great efficiency and decision of character, possessing energy, fervent piety, and a wonderful equability of temper. Her administrative qualities were marked by an undefinable quiet influence, which created an enthusiasm in all with whom she labored. She did very much to promote thrift and forethought in the members of her household, and also a self-sacrificing spirit of benevolence in them and in the parish. She acted upon the principle, and inculcated it in others, that what is given without sacrifice is hardly true benevolence, and therefore, to make up a purse for some benevolent or missionary object, she would interest the members of her family to go without tea, sugar or coffee, and thus save the cost of such articles for the object in hand. In this way the true spirit of benevolence was implanted, which grew into a habit to be practiced thro life in many cases.*

He graduated from Dartmouth 1804, and immediately after entered on a course of theological study, under the Rev. Dr. Burton, at Thetford, Vt. In June, 1805, he was "approbated" by the Orange Association, and preached his first sermon July 4, 1805, as a preparatory lecture for Rev. Sylvester Dana of Orford, N. H. He continued his studies with Dr. Burton till October, usually preaching somewhere on the Sabbath.

In 1819 Mr. Thurston was unanimously elected professor of theology by the trustees of the "Maine Charity School," then located in Hampden, now better known as the Bangor theological seminary. He yielded to the unanimous wish of the church, and declined the appointment.

In 1853 the trustees of Dartmouth college conferred on him the degree of doctor of divinity. He was an efficient member of most of the benevolent societies, vice-pres. of the American Missionary Association from 1846 (the date of the organization), and pres. from 1859 till his death. He was a member of the board of overseers of Bowdoin college, a trustee of the Bangor theological seminary, of Hallowell and Monmouth academies for many years, and of the Maine Missionary Society for half a century. We copy from his journal:—"I remained pastor of the church in Winthrop till Oct. 15, 1851, when, in compliance with my request, with the advice of an ecclesiastical council, I was dismissed. I was induced to request a dismission, because some desired to have a younger man, and some were dissatisfied with my antislavery course. I had conscientiously plead the cause of the enslaved, and had endeavored to act as I believed and prayed. I removed to Vassalboro, where I preached half of the time, and the other half was divided between the North Parish in ophy and political economy, from 1840 to 1867; president of Hamilton college 1867. Resigned Aug. 25, 1881, and took the place of professors Sanborn and Noyes at Dartmouth, 1881 to 1883. From 1883 was professor of philosophy at Bowdoin college till his death. He has published various addresses and contributed to reviews. His life of Rufus Choate was the most notable. He was writing the life of George P. Marsh at the time of his death, Nov. 4, 1887. He m., 1846, Sarah Savage, da. of Rev. Jacob Van Veehten, D.D., of Schenectady, N. Y.; seven children, one of whom, Francis, was elected professor of Greek in Dartmouth college, 1881.

Augusta and the Union house in Sidney. The year following I preached in Vassalboro. The next year, to December, 1854, I preached three-fourths of the time in Vassalboro and one-fourth in Sidney. Not being desirous of having the charge of two churches I left Searsport the last of December, 1858, and being invited to preach a year in Litchfield, Me., I began to preach there the third Sabbath in January, 1859, on a salary of $300." He remained in Litchfield, continuing vigorous in body and mind, preached his last sermon on the day of the National Fast, just after the assassination of President Lincoln, seventeen days before his death.

Few appreciated more highly, or enjoyed more keenly, the blessings of the conjugal and parental relations. His house was therefore the home of quietness and serene comfort. He had great pleasure in the society of his friends. He greeted them with warm cordiality, and entertained them with sincere, tho unpretentious, hospitality. As a man of intellectual capacity, he stood among the ablest men in the ministry of Maine; as a scholar, he took high rank in college; as a theologian, he acquired so much reputation that several young men, even after theological seminaries were established, chose to receive his private instruction in the study of divinity.

As a preacher, he regarded the doctrines of the gospel as constituting its vital force, shedding light on its precepts, opening to view

MITCHELL FAMILY.

I. EXPERIENCE MITCHELL, the earliest paternal ancestor of the family in the country, having, with other Puritans, fled from persecution in England to Holland, and dwelt there for a time; came to America in the ship "Ann," arriving at Plymouth in 1623; resided there till 1631, when he became a resident and proprietor of Bridgewater, where he d. 1689, aged 80 years.

II. EDWARD MITCHELL, son of Experience, probably lived and d. at Bridgewater, leaving at his death several children.

III. JACOB MITCHELL, son of Edward, settled at Dartmouth, where, in 1675, at the breaking out of King Philip's war, himself and wife suffered death at the hands of the Indians.

IV. DEA. JACOB MITCHELL, son of Jacob, dwelt at Kingston; removed to North Yarmouth, Me., in 1728; was a founder of the first church there in 1730; elected deacon 1737; d. 1744, aged 74 years.

V. DEA. JACOB MITCHELL, son of Jacob, lived at Pembroke; followed his father to No. Yarmouth; was elected deacon in the same church, 1745; d. in 1784, aged 87 years.

VI. DEA. DAVID MITCHELL, son of Jacob, a man of culture, judge in the Massachusetts courts, member of the Massachusetts convention of 1788, that ratified the Constitution of the United States, became a member of the church in North Yarmouth 1753; elected deacon in 1770; d. while a member of the senate of Massachusetts, 1796, aged 67 years.

VII. DEA. JACOB MITCHELL, m. Hannah Brown, sister to Prudence (Brown) Thurston [see note p. 88,], to whose memory filial piety has now erected a monument, was son of David, elected deacon 1796; d. 1848, aged 84 years; a man greatly beloved and honored by his fellow-citizens, — having been chosen by them to the legislatures of Massachusetts and Maine, and having held important civil offices for more than thirty successive years.

DEA. AMMI R. MITCHELL, son of David, and elder brother of the preceding, a physician, and prominent civilian, elected deacon in 1803; d. suddenly in 1824, aged 62 years.

VIII. DEA. AMMI R. MITCHELL, son by 1st m. of Jacob, removed from Yarmouth to Bath; elected deacon in the then "North," now Winter St. Congregational church 1824, which office he still holds.

DEA. JACOB MITCHELL, son, by 1st m., of Jacob, united with the church so long served by his ancestors 1822; was a physician in Chelsea, Mass., where he was elected deacon in the Winnisimmet Congregational church, in the year 1856; d. Jan. 11, 1873.

IX. JACOB MITCHELL, son of Jacob of Boston, is a member of the Winnisimmet Congregati nal church, Chelsea.

From this family have sprung several ministers of the gospel. Rev. David M. Mitchell, a man of singular purity, remarkably successful in winning souls to Christ, d. at Waltham, Mass., Nov. 27, 1869, was one of them. Others are now in service in different and distant states of the country. In the territory of ancient North Yarmouth are now embraced Yarmouth, North Yarmouth, Cumberland, Pownal, Freeport and Harpswell. In these towns there are now seven Congregational churches, beside a large number of other churches of evangelical faith. The parent church has contributed largely of its members for the constitution of the larger part of these. Yet the original church, of which Dea. Jacob Mitchell was a founder and a deacon, lives and thrives, and in its whole history his family has had representatives in its membership, than whom none others have been more loved, honored, or essentially identified with its progress and work.

the path of life, unfolding the wondrous method of grace and salvation, displaying the wisdom and matchless love of God in redemption, teaching men what they must do, and what they must be, in order to gain eternal life, inforcing duty by the sublime fact of eternal retribution both for saints and sinners. His manners in the pulpit were characterized by simplicity, solemnity, earnestness, and an affectionate persuasiveness. Utterly unpretentious, he stood erect in the calm simplicity of one charged with a message from God. As a pastor, he was kind, faithful and sympathetic. He not only visited the people from house to house, but preached lectures on week days and evenings in the various parts of his parish very frequently. Among the leading elements of his Christian character were reverence, conscientiousness, devoutness, and firmness of moral principle. He would sooner have suffered the loss of all human favor than the approbation of his own conscience. For the sake of preaching the gospel he was willing to practice the most rigid economy, and live on very humble fare. Notwithstanding his means were small, he gave a tenth of all his income in charity.

The question of right, of duty, having been settled, he adhered to it with oaken firmness. His quick moral discernment carried him in advance of his times in regard to the evils to be reformed. Early did he become a laborer in the cause of temperance and of the oppressed. He remembered those in bonds as bound with them. Notwithstanding all he suffered in the cause of the oppressed, whether by his brethren in the ministry, or the church, or the baser sort, I never heard of a hard or unforgiving word he ever uttered respecting them. His forgiving love, his broad charity, covered a multitude of wrongs done to himself.

DEA. RICHARD THURSTON[5] of Bangor, Me. (David,[4] Richard,[3] Daniel,[2] Daniel[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of David and Mary (Bacon) Thurston of Sedgwick, Me.; born in Rowley, Mass., July 5, 1781; baptized by Rev. James Chandler; married, by Rev. N. Whitman, Oct. 13, 1817, ANN BOWERS, born in Bilerica, Mass., Feb. 17, 1787, daughter of Samuel Bowers, a merchant in Boston. They both died in Bangor, he May 24, 1852, she June 13, 1869.

He went to Sedgwick, Me., with his father, in 1796, spent a year or more in New Bedford, Mass., and about 1805 settled in Frankfort, Me., as a merchant. In 1832 removed to Bangor, in the lumber business. Early in life he experienced religion, and was instrumental in establishing a Congregational church in Frankfort, of which he became a deacon. He was a very hospitable man, and kept what was called in those days a "minister's tavern." Frankfort was a godless place when he settled there as a young man, and his life was so sober and correct that he was called deacon long before the office was conferred upon him.

Mary Thurston[5] (David,[4] Richard,[3] Daniel,[2] Daniel[1]), sister of the preceding, and daughter of David and Chloe (Redington) Thurston of Sedgwick, Me.; born in Rowley, Mass., April 7, 1792; baptized by Rev. Joseph Dana; married, at Sedgwick, Feb. 18, 1818, by her father, who was a justice, assisted by Rev. David Thurston, her brother, Dea. Bliss Blodget, born in Lebanon, N. H., Dec. 9, 1785, son of Daniel and Mary (Bliss) Blodget of Chelsea, Vt. He died April 29, 1857. She died Sept. 27, 1882, aged 90.

Dea. Blodget's parents moved to Chelsea in his early childhood, where he remained till he was twenty-one, when he went to Bucksport, Me., into a general store as clerk; served one year, and became a partner. He was an officer in the Congregational church; always interested in all religious and educational objects; a public-spirited man, who never spared any effort for the education and advancement of his children or others. In all he was thoroughly aided by his consort, and their lives have been filled with usefulness, and their house has always been the home of all in any way connected with the advancement of society and religion.

Samuel Thurston[5] of Bangor, Me. (David,[4] Richard,[3] Daniel,[2] Daniel[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of David and Chloe (Redington) Thurston of Sedgwick, Me.; born in Rowley, Mass., July 8, 1793; baptized by Rev. Ebenezer Bradford; married, first, Jan. 21, 1824, PRUDENCE GOODALE, born in Worcester, Mass., March 16, 1801, daughter of Hon. Ephraim and Prudence (Willard) Goodale* of Orrington, Me.; she died Dec. 19, 1838. Second, Jan. 1, 1840, MRS. CHARLOTTE (GOODALE) GREELEY, sister of his first wife, born May 13, 1809; married, first, July 16, 1832, Rev. Greenleaf Greeley, a Methodist minister of Readfield, Me., a man of deep piety and much usefulness; he died in Burke county, Ga., where he had gone for his health, Nov. 25, 1835.

Mr. Thurston was a merchant at Mill creek, Orrington, Me., for eleven years, till about 1831, where he accumulated a very handsome property. He then moved to Brewer, Me., where he kept store, built houses, dealt in lumber, and succeeded well till 1835, when he entered into the land speculation, which swept like a destructive tornado over all the northern part of New England, and lost all the accumulations of his past life. His wife was sick with consumption, soon after died, and with five young children he commenced life anew. In 1840 he moved to Bangor and pursued the lumber business. Here, too, he met with many losses by fire and flood and business indorsements, which he bore with serene patience.

When he started in life he determined to attain riches, and he had come almost to the realization of his wishes, when the disaster came which showed him that "it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps," but that the Lord directeth them for better ends than the mere attainment of wealth. The loss of his wife and his earthly possessions led him to consider those interests of a more enduring character, and he gave his heart to God, established a family altar, taught his children, both by precept and example, to seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness. He gave his children a good education, sustained the institutions of society generally, and was a decided abolitionist, when it was very unpopular to be one. He was received into the Bangor Central church 1860, at that time under the care of Prof. Shepard of the theological seminary. Thro all he maintained an unblemished moral character, and was respected by every one.

SARAH THURSTON[5] (David,[4] Richard,[3] Daniel,[2] Daniel[1]), sister of the preceding, and daughter of David and Chloe (Redington) Thurston of Sedgwick, Me.; born in Rowley, Mass., April 1, 1796; baptized by Rev. Humphrey C. Perley; married, Oct. 30, 1823, DEA. JOHN BUCK, born Feb. 16, 1795, son of Benjamin and Sarah (Sewall) Buck of Bucksport, Me. He died Feb. 13, 1872. She died May 20, 1886, aged 90.

Mr. John Buck was a man of a genial and happy nature. He engaged in school teaching and fishing, sometimes taking fifty salmon from his weir at a single tide; commenced business in Orland, Me., in 1823, as a trader, and increased his facilities as the place grew; bought large tracts of timber land, built and equipped fishing vessels and coasters; was successful; became one of the first men in the town, and offices of honor and trust were often conferred upon him. He was deacon of the Congregational church from the time of its organization, Sept. 25, 1850, till his death. He was chiefly instrumental in forming the church and in building a house of worship; constantly doing good things that the world never heard of; a strong antislavery man, and acted as conductor on the "under-ground" railroad, during the years of the fugitive slave law, sheltering and helping many on their way to the Queen's dominions. He was heartily aided by his companion in life in all social and benevolent matters, and their house was the common resort for all progressive minds, as well as relatives, who were all made to feel at home and happy in their munificent mansion. A favorite expression of his as they assembled at the table on social occasions was, "I have a large house but Mrs. Buck has a large heart."

REV. STEPHEN THURSTON[5] of Searsport, Me. (David,[4] Richard,[3] Daniel,[2] Daniel[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of David and Chloe (Redington) Thurston of Sedgwick, Me.; born there Dec. 22, 1797; baptized by Rev. Daniel Merrill; married, at No. 67 Kingston street, Boston, Mass., June 5, 1827, CLARA MATILDA BENSON, born in Bucksport, Me., Jan. 6, 1803, daughter of John and Sarah (Buck) Benson of Boston. He died May 20, 1884. She died May 6, 1886.

Mr. Thurston joined the Congregational church in Bluehill, Me., under the pastoral charge of Rev. Jonathan Fisher, in 1816, at the age of nineteen, and had his mind turned toward the ministry. He studied nearly two years with his brother, David Thurston of Winthrop. By an imprudent use of his eyes there, they were so injured as to render a college course an impossibility. After more than a year spent in other employments, he entered Bangor theological seminary, and graduated in 1825, ordained as pastor of the first church in Searsport, Aug. 9, 1826, remained there until June 22, 1864, when he was elected secretary of the Maine Missionary Society, which office he filled, with great satisfaction to the churches, till June, 1876, when failing health induced him to resign. In 1856 he received the degree of doctor of divinity from Colby University. He was trustee of the Bangor theological seminary from 1850 to 1882, and president of the board from 1860 to 1880; trustee of the Maine Missionary Society from 1849 to 1880; trustee of the Maine Congregational Charitable Society from 1864 to 1881; vice-pres. of the American Missionary Association from 1864 to 1883.

He was abundantly blessed in his labors as pastor in Searsport. During the first two years one hundred and ten were added to the church. Eminently social in his nature, his relatives and friends recall many happy and joyful seasons spent at his cheerful fireside and at theirs. Particularly fraternal have been the relations between himself and his brothers and sisters. Many delightful social gatherings have given expression to the goodwill, kindliness of heart, social gratification and affection for each other, consecrated by a manifest trust and repose in the Father above, which have bound them together as with "hooks of steel." But the climax, the grandest and best of all, was on the occasion of their golden wedding, June 5, 1877.*

The denomination in Waldo county owes more to his labors and counsel than to those of any other man. Of the eleven Congregational churches now reported in that county, only five were in existence when he commenced his labors there. His pastorate was nearly forty years, but not for lack of calls to other and larger churches in the cities. Rev. John O. Fiske, D.D., of Bath, Me., says: —

It was a pathetic pleasure to me to offer my feeble tribute of affection, respect and reverence in memory of your honored uncle at our late meeting in Biddeford. His high, unbending character, his inflexible love of the truth of God, his power and impressiveness as a preacher, his large success in the work of the ministry, which he loved so well, his devoted, unselfish, most judicious and successful service of the churches as secretary of our Maine Missionary Society, combined with his affectionate heart and genial and courteous address, have placed him in the very highest ranks of the ministers of Maine.

ELIZABETH CHLOE THURSTON[5] (David,[4] Richard,[3] Daniel,[2] Daniel[1]), sister of the preceding, and daughter of David and Chloe (Redington) Thurston of Sedgwick, Me.; born there June 18, 1803; baptized by Rev. Daniel Merrill; married, in Sedgwick, Jan. 1, 1843, REV. JOSEPH SMITH, born in Cornish, Me., Feb. 7, 1810, son of John Pike Smith, born in New Market, N. H., Dec. 6, 1785, a farmer and dealer in lumber in Denmark, where he died, and Nancy Hayes, born in Dover, N. H., April 27, 1786, died in Belvidere, Ill. Mrs. Elizabeth Chloe Smith died in Bangor, Me., June 21, 1881, and her husband married second, July 2, 1882, Mrs. Elizabeth Gardner Morse, born July 28, 1822, daughter of Capt. Shubael and Mary (Gardner) Dimick of Lyme, N. H.

Rev. Joseph Smith attended North Bridgton and Fryeburg academies, and studied two years with Rev. J. P. Fessenden of South Bridgton, attended the classical school at Bangor, and graduated from Bangor theological seminary in 1842; ordained as an evangelist at Oldtown, Nov. 10, 1842, where he preached a year. Taken sick, he went to his father's in Denmark, and after a long illness preached a while there. In 1845 he went to Wilton, and labored four years; spent the winter of 1849-50 in Belvidere, Ill., supplying the Presbyterian church six months. The malarial climate injuring his health, he returned to Maine, and in the autumn of 1850 commenced preaching at Boothbay Harbor, and remained a year and a half, when health failing again he went to his mother's, then residing in Bridgton. Commenced preaching at Lovell, July 11, 1852, where he remained about sixteen years; spent a few months at the West, and returned to supply at Buxton Center in 1868, and in Minot 1871 till July, 1876. He was a laborious, faithful and successful pastor, having received one hundred and sixty-one members to the church during his ministry in his various fields of labor. He finally made his home in Bangor, where he spent the last few years of his life, and died Jan. 3, 1889. No children.

DANIEL OLIVER THURSTON[5] of North Sedgwick, Me. (David,[4] Richard,[3] Daniel,[2] Daniel[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of David and Chloe (Redington) Thurston of Sedgwick, Me.; born there May 5, 1805; baptized by Rev. Daniel Oliver;* married, June 1, 1843, APHIA KIMBALL HINCKLEY, daughter of Nehemiah and Phebe Peters (Kimball) Hinckley of Bluehill, Me. She died June 2, 1878, aged 57. He retired Saturday night in good health, after a hard day's work at haying, and was found dead Sunday morning, July 19, 1885, with no signs of distress or struggle.

Mr. Thurston always lived on the homestead; was a thrifty farmer and lumberman, having acquired a competence, beside giving his children a good education. He was a man of very strong home sympathies, very seldom going out of town; an active, energetic business habit, with a wonderfully bright and cheerful nature, which made him a favorite among his relatives and all who knew him. His wife was a member of the Congregational church in Bluehill, and was greatly beloved by all.

*After Rev. Mr. Merrill with a majority of the church in Sedgwick became Baptists about thirty, under the lead of David Thurston, the father of Daniel Oliver, maintained meetings under the patronage of the Massachusetts Missionary Society. Revs. Daniel Lovejoy, Jotham Sewall, John Sawyer [who lived to be 103 years old], and Daniel Oliver of Boston [who baptized and gave the name to Daniel Oliver Thurston], labored there at different times.

WILLIAM THURSTON[5] of Newburyport, Mass. (David,[4] Richard,[3] Daniel,[2] Daniel[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of David and Chloe (Redington) Thurston of Sedgwick, Me.; born there Feb. 7, 1807; baptized by Rev. Joseph Brown; married, first, Oct. 16, 1837, DOROTHY PEARSON COLMAN, born Feb. 13, 1810, daughter of Jeremiah and Mary (Chute) Colman of Newburyport, Mass. [see no. 447]; she died Jan. 4, 1868. Second, March 3, 1870, CAROLINE ELIZABETH GREENLEAF, born Feb. 8, 1823, daughter of George and Elizabeth (Wheelwright) Greenleaf of Newburyport. He died Sept. 16, 1882.

Mr. Thurston was a lumber merchant in Newburyport. He left his father's house at the age of seventeen, and lived at South Orrington some four years, at Bucksport a year, at West Prospect, now Searsport, a year, at Bangor for five years, till 1836, then Bucksport and Orland till 1844, when he went to Newburyport, and in 1852 he received his brother-in-law, James Chute Colman, into partnership, under the firm name of Thurston & Colman. He joined the Congregational church in Bucksport in 1829; removed his connection to the first church in Bangor, and colonized to form the Hammond St. church, Bangor, in 1833; removed to the first church in Newbury, Mass., in 1845, and Jan. 1, 1850, was, with others, dismissed to form the Whitefield Congregational church in Newburyport, and was the senior deacon from its formation. Both his wives were members of this church. He has been an active and influential member of the church, moderator of the General Conference of Massachusetts and president of the State Sunday-school Convention of all the evangelical denominations of the state, held at Newburyport, 1858.

The Newburyport Herald of Feb. 8, 1882, says:—"On the occasion of the 75th anniversary of the birth of Dea. Wm. Thurston there was a very pleasant gathering of the members of Whitefield parish at his house. He is a highly esteemed citizen of this community, an honorable and high-minded merchant, and an active and influential Christian. He was one of the original members of the Whitefield church, which was organized Jan. 1, 1850, and he has been its treasurer and senior deacon since its formation. The family from which he descended was an old Newbury family. The stock is one of remarkable vigor, and has furnished a large number of clergymen. Two of his brothers were eminent pastors in Maine, and eight of his nephews and grand-nephews have entered the ministry. On the table of refreshments was a beautiful birthday cake, surrounded by 75 candles, and on the top of it '1807–1882. W. T.' Good singing was interspersed through the evening."

Rev. Daniel T. Fiske, D.D., of Belleville, Mass., preached an able sermon at the Whitefield church shortly after his death, from Mark 12: 17—"Render to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and to God the things that are God's." At the close he gave the following tribute to the late Deacon William Thurston:—"Deeply do I sympathize with you in your great loss, which is not your loss alone, but that of all the churches in this city and vicinity. Deacon William Thurston was widely known, and known as an intelligent, upright, staunch, earnest christian. He succeeded better than most of us do in rightly adjusting the claims of Cæsar and the claims of God. A good man, a noble man has fallen, a man of principle, a man of God. His work is done, and well done. May his mantle fall upon some young man here whom the Lord has prepared to receive it. May his example stimulate many to greater zeal and steadfastness in the christian life. May he, being dead, yet speak to this church and people in tones more influential and persuasive even than when living. And may his cherished memory be, as I am sure it will be, a perpetual benediction to this church, which he so tenderly loved, and for which he so long and so faithfully labored and prayed. 'Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them.'"

DEA. MOSES THURSTON[5] (Moses,[4] Abner,[3] James,[2] Daniel[1]), second child of Moses and Hannah (Sewall) Thurston of Hollis, N. H.; born probably in Newbury, Mass., June 7, 1744; married (intentions entered on town records of Westminster as "Moses Thurston of Newbury, Mass., and Esther Bigelow of Westminster, was published Nov. 9, 1767"), April 22, 1768, ESTHER BIGELOW, born April 22, 1744, daughter of Elizur[3] and Mary (Fiske) Bigelow of Watertown, Mass., son of Joshua[2] and Elizabeth (Flagg) Bigelow of Westminster, son of John[1] and Mary (Warren) Bigelow, who came from England and settled in Narragansett, now Watertown, Mass. John[1] was a blacksmith, and took the oath of fidelity 1652. On his gravestone is "died June 29, 1809, aged 65 years, 22 days"; she died Oct. 24, 1831.

Mr. Thurston was a hatter in Westminster, Mass., excepting a few years in Hollis, N. H. He was quite a successful business man; a minute-man in the revolutionary war; a deacon of the Congregational church, which he loved with a great love; a zealous and elevated christian. He was noted for a retentive memory. When quite young he was boarding in a family where the minister also boarded. One Sunday morning, while the family were at breakfast, he took the sermon from the table where the minister had been writing it, and read it through hastily, went to the table and said he thought he should not attend church, as he would not hear anything new if he went. The minister protested, and said the sermon he was going to preach was a new one that he had never delivered. Moses said there was nothing in it that he did not know already, and further, that he could repeat every word of it. They doubted, and he was requested to repeat it, which he did, much to the amazement of all who heard him.

Children, born in Westminster, except as noted.

CHLOE THURSTON[5] (Moses,[4] Abner,[3] James,[2] Daniel[1]), sister of the preceding, and daughter of Moses and Hannah (Sewall) Thurston of Hollis, N. H.; born there 1758; married, 1782, STEPHEN RUNNELS, born July 3, 1754, son of Ebenezer and Abigail (Sollis) Runnels of Haverhill, Mass. He died suddenly July 22, 1798; she died Dec. 13, 1807.

Mr. Runnels was a "minute-man" in Capt. James Sawyer's company 1775, and among the eight months' men raised just after the battle of Lexington; was at the battle of Bunker Hill; was six years in the revolutionary war, a sergeant, and at the surrender of Burgoyne; a blacksmith, like his father, and in 1777 moved to Hollis. Here he became affianced to Miss Chloe Thurston, and being absent as a soldier, used to send his wages to her, which she faithfully kept, notwithstanding the depreciation of its value, so that when she came to buy her furniture she was obliged to pay seven dollars for a white cream pitcher, and for other things in proportion. In 1789 they moved to Vershire, Vt., where her brother-in-law, Rev. Stephen Fuller, was settled. He "had a loving disposition and great muscular powers." She afterward moved to Fletcher, Vt., but finally settled on the wild lands owned by her husband in Topsham, Vt., where she died.

afterward used for a floor. He planted two acres of corn among the logs; had to go thirty miles to mill. Their salt was brought forty miles and cost five dollars per bushel. The clothing they carried with them had to be substituted by buckskin. In 1821 and 1822 they could get but twenty-five cents per bushel for wheat after carrying it forty miles, and taking pay in unbleached cotton cloth at fifty cents per yard. The building of the Ohio canal brought them relief, and their circumstances began to mend. He was an enterprising christian man, devoted to the cause of education and the advancement of the settlement. He d. Oct. 30, 1844; 13 children.

PETER THURSTON[5] (Moses,[4] Abner,[3] James,[2] Daniel[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of Moses and Hannah (Sewall) Thurston of Hollis, N. H.; born there Dec. 10, 1761; married, first [published in Boxford, Mass., April 22, 1787, Peter Thurston as from Fairfax, Vt.] EUNICE CHADWICK of Haverhill, Mass.; second, MRS. HANNAH WHEELER, née BUTLER of Fairfax, who had several children by her first husband, one of whom was Almon Wheeler, the father of William Almon Wheeler of New York city, the vice-president of the United States 1879. Peter Thurston died at the home in Granville, O., Oct., 1827, and was buried there. His widow died at her son Johnson's in Centerburg, May 23, 1866, aged 97, and was buried in the family cemetery of her son Johnson.* They were both members and he a deacon in the Baptist church.

Mrs. Thurston was a woman of great energy, endurance, bright intellect, and social culture, having remarkably uniform good health, a sound and strong physical body, which, together with similar qualities in her husband, produced a wonderfully healthy, vigorous and hardy family of children. She would weave fourteen yards of cloth a day after she was sixty years of age. She joined the Methodist church in Ohio.

DANIEL THURSTON[5] (Daniel,[4] Nathaniel,[3] Stephen,[2] Daniel[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of Daniel and Hannah (Hilton)

Thurston of Aurora, Erie Co., N. Y.; born in Windsor, Vt., Nov. 7, 1784; married, Aug. 8, 1819, ELIZA CHILCOTT, born in Muncie, Pa., of Virginia and Maryland parentage, June 29, 1802, daughter of Amos and Martha (Richards) Chilcott. He died in Orion, Nov. 19, 1854, a painful and lingering death, occasioned by a broken thigh, and was buried in Mount Vernon, Mich. She died in Seymour, Ind., Jan. 14, 1871.

Mr. Thurston was a farmer, attorney-at-law in Washington, Mich., and judge of the circuit court for more than twenty years. He built the first schoolhouse [of logs] on the northeast corner of his farm, 1¼ miles from his house, and paid the teachers out of his own means for twelve years. He was colonel of volunteer cavalry in the war of 1812, and participated in the battle of Lundy's Lane. He was a strong-minded, enterprising and public-spirited man, of the Universalist faith. Soon after he built it some scamp placed a sign on the top of the schoolhouse — "Thurston's Folly." He lived long enough to prove his wisdom and their folly. His wife was a Quaker. He was a man of imposing stature, being six feet, two inches in height, spare made, dark complexion, black hair, whiskers and eyes, and not the least gray at the time of his death.

THOMAS THURSTON[5] (Daniel,[4] Nathaniel,[3] Stephen,[2] Daniel[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of Daniel and Hannah (Hilton) Thurston of Aurora, Erie Co., N. Y.; born in Windsor, Vt., Feb. 25, 1786; married, Sept. 9, 1813, ELECTA WILLCOX. She died Nov. 26, 1833; he died March 21, 1872.

Mr. Thurston was a farmer and shoemaker in Aurora, N. Y. He was a stern, strong-willed man, a decided Universalist, and deacon of the church in Aurora, a Whig and after a Republican, a man of character, honored by his fellow-citizens with several offices of trust; served in the war of 1812; obtained leave to go home and make a pair of boots, his father taking his place in the army. While at home he heard that his father had been killed by the Indians. He and his brother Daniel immediately started for Buffalo (which had been burned by the British), with two ox teams, and met their father just out of the city. They loaded their teams with ammunition, which had been left by the American army, and carried it to a place of safety from the British. In 1850 he sold his farm and moved to Leoni, where he had a farm of 500 acres.; P. O. address, Grass Lake, Mich.

She has in her possession two heirlooms of interest, a pewter platter, 52 inches in circumference, formerly belonging to her grandfather Daniel Thurston, one of a set that he divided among his children; and a quart cup which he gave to her father. On the platter are the letters, "W. C. H.," and something more that cannot be made out. She has also a plain gold band ring with the letters "W. C." inside, and the motto, "This is my heart's delight," which is thought to be about 300 years old, and has been used as a wedding-ring for every generation as far back as they can trace.

Mr. Sutton and family started for Oregon, March 21, 1854, and Mrs. Sutton died Sept. 15, 1854, before reaching their destination, and was buried about seven miles from the Dalles, near Columbia river. Her son Franklin says, "The death of our mother and the loss of nearly all our property in crossing the plains, made it necessary for the children to scatter. We found homes in pleasant places, and tho we had to rough it, and look out for ourselves, there was enough work to be done, and good pay. Nowhere on earth can be found a nobler, more generous or more intelligent people than the big-brained and big-hearted pioneers of Oregon."

She was a woman of culture and refinement, and possessed the highest social qualities. It can truly be said, "She stretcheth out her hand to the poor; yea, she reacheth forth her hand to the needy"; "if any one came to her hungry she would feed them; if thirsty, she would give them drink; and many a poor traveler has she kept over night, and given a supper and breakfast, who have gone away asking God's blessing to rest upon her for deeds of charity bestowed upon them;" died May 18, 1878.

Mr. Thurston, during his minority, assisted his father upon the farm; was educated at the district school, and after he became of age attended the academy at Walpole and New Ipswich, and high school at Alstead Center, fall terms, for four years, and worked on the farm summers. Taught school in the towns of Sullivan, Gilsum, Marlboro, Swanzey, Keene, Westmoreland, Walpole, and twenty winters in Alstead. He commenced teaching the winter after he was twenty-one, and closed the winter after he was sixty-six, having taught fifty-five terms and over two thousand different scholars. He was superintending school committee twelve years, one of the supervisors of the check list and selectman four years; justice of the peace for the county of Cheshire twenty-five years; filled other minor offices in Alstead, and farmed until he sold his farm, on which he and his father had lived over seventy years. Since March 30, 1885, retired from business, and lives with his daughter, Mrs. Roundy, in Charlestown, Mass.

CYRUS THURSTON[6] (Thomas,[5] John,[4] Jonathan,[3] Daniel,[2] Daniel[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of Thomas and Lydia (Davis) Thurston of Fitchburg, Mass.; born there May 20, 1796; married, April 16, 1822, CAROLINE BOUTELLE, born Oct. 12, 1796, daughter of Nathaniel and Polly (Hill) Boutelle of Fitchburg; she died April 30, 1859; he died March 12, 1884.

Cyrus Thurston was a teacher of singing thirty years, in twenty-eight towns beside Fitchburg; teacher of public schools several years, selectman and assessor of Fitchburg sixteen years, overseer of the poor thirty-four years, member of board of health one year; always a faithful and efficient officer, a friend and benefactor to the poor, a helper in every good cause, and warmly loved by all, as the account of his eighty-second birthday fully shows.* The citizens procured a full-sized portrait of him and presented it to be hung in the city hall. His funeral was attended by a large concourse of people. Rev. Mr. Pierson, pastor of the Unitarian church where Mr. Thurston led the singing, said, "But greater than his usefulness as an officer of the city was his love and value of music. In this he was higher and better than any other public servant. The lessons taught by teachers in the public schools are forgotten; the sermons preached by ministers become obliterated, but the songs taught by Father Thurston will remain in the hearts and memories of his pupils forever. Music has a place which nothing else can fill. Another characteristic was his simple, childlike faith. He was not a member of any church, but he sang in our choir for thirty years; he believed in uprightness, cheerfulness and mercy. He loved to read Micah."

* The Shattuck farm is about half a mile north of the old Thurston homestead, and has been in possession of the family more than one hundred years; the land was cleared by my husband's grandfather. A son of the fourth generation now lives upon it. At one time there was a prospect of an alliance of the two families, but for some reason unknown to me it was deferred until the succeeding generation, when, instead of Maria Thurston marrying an elder son of Micah Shattuck, her daughter (Mary Jane) married the youngest son of the same, whose name is Sewell as above.

*WEBSTER FAMILY

The Websters were weavers in the north of England, and are to this day at their looms in their homes. John Webster came early to Ipswich, Mass.; was "clerk of the bonds," and had a servant named White. He had Stephen, whose grandson probably was Stephen of Newburyport, Mass., a ship-carpenter, who in 1740 purchased Salisbury Point, and established a shipyard. When the revolutionary war broke out he had seven ships on the stocks, which all but one rotted. Was at Boston when the tea was thrown overboard, came home, found his wife with company, and threw the contents of the tea waiter into the fire. Was captain at the taking of Ticonderoga. His son Samuel was a minute-man, and when called struck his ax into the ship timber and went into the army. He m., Dec. 24, 1763, Susannah Jewell, and next day rode on the ice to Plum island, which has not been done since. They had nine children, seven sons, three of whom were lost at sea. 1884 there were two of the name. James, the youngest son, m. Mehitable Pearson [no. 422].

Isaac Sheldon Newell of Dorchester, Mass., had Isaac, m., 1708, Mary Woodford; Thomas, m., 1725, Mary Hinsdale; Rachel, m. John Pomroy of Northampton, Mass, and had Rachel (Pomroy), who was a member of Pres. Edwards' church, an earnest christian, m. Isaac New-contractor and builder in New York. After the death of his father he became converted, and desired to study for the ministry. His mother had small means and a large family, but encouraged him, and told him to write a sermon and read it to her. This he did, and that decided the matter, so that he commenced to study. He bought his time, having two years more to serve, for $150; graduated from Yale 1834; studied divinity with Dr. Nathaniel W. Taylor, during which time he prepared for his brother-in-law "Olney's History of the U. S.," preferring not to have his name affixed to it. From the income of this work he was enabled to pay the bills for his education. He was commissioned by the Home Missionary Society, in August, 1836, to go west, which he did. Stopping at Evansville, Ind., over the Sabbath, he was invited to preach, and received a call from the Presbyterian church there, was ordained and installed over it in Nov., 1838. This was an old-school region, and an effort was made, after learning he was a pupil of Dr. Taylor of New Haven, to drive him out, considering his theology to be heretical; but the people would not consent, and he remained nine years. For some years after this he preached and labored in the cause of education. Was agent one year for Marietta college. In July, 1856, he was called to organize Congregational churches in Cannon Falls and Northfield, Minn., the latter place being just laid out by Mr. North, a lawyer in Minneapolis, Minn. Carlton college was eventually located at Northfield. He labored in this region until he became unfitted for the duties of a pastor by deafness. After the death of their son-in-law Wightman, in 1870, they went to Zumbrota, Minn., to be with their bereaved daughter and her three children. In 1878 he went to Owatonna, Minn., to aid his son-in-law Hillman in business, and remained there about four years; enjoying a green old age, residing with his daughter, Mrs. Mills, in Marietta, O.

REV. RICHARD BOWERS THURSTON[6] (Richard,[5] David,[4] Richard,[3] Daniel,[2] Daniel[1]), eldest son of Richard and Ann (Bowers) Thurston of Bangor, Me.; born in Charlestown, Mass., June 28, 1819; married, in Friendsville, Pa., May 24, 1847, JANE MILLER PIERCE, born in Owego, N. Y., Sept. 14, 1823, daughter of Henry Miller and Susan (Peironnet) Pierce of Waverly, N. Y.

Mrs. Thurston had unusual skill as an amateur artist. Her gift was useful in promoting the culture of art in the places of her residence. In the time she could withdraw from the cares of her family she painted many landscapes and other pictures of much beauty and merit, which adorn her home and those of many of her friends.

Mr. Thurston belonged to the first class which graduated from the Bangor city high school in 1837; graduated from Bowdoin college in 1841, and from the theological seminary, Bangor, 1846; ordained over the Congregational church in Waterville, Nov. 11, 1846; dismissed April 27, 1855, and became acting pastor of the church at Chickopee Falls, Mass., where he remained three years; settled in Waltham, Mass., 1858; installed over the church in Stamford, Conn., 1865; supplied the second church in Fair Haven two years, and removed to Old Saybrook, Conn., Jan. 1, 1877, where he was stated supply till 1881; Nov. 20, 1882, installed over the Congregational church in North Greenwich, Conn.; sermon by Rev. John Rogers Thurston of Whitinsville, Mass.; installing prayer by Rev. Joseph Greenleaf of New Canaan; charge to the pastor by Rev. Samuel J. Mills Merwin of Wilton; right hand of fellowship by Rev. Samuel Scovil of Stamford; address to the people by Rev. George A. Gordon of Greenwich; benediction by the pastor. December, 1887, he was compelled to resign on account of his health. He removed to Stamford, Conn., and in 1888 underwent three amputations of his limbs, made necessary by stoppage of the circulation of the blood. He is a man of more than ordinary ability, and his ministry was accompanied in all these places with satisfactory results. He was the author of the prize essay on the "Error and Duty in regard to Slavery," published in 1857, and of the resolution passed by the Jubilee Convention in Chicago, 1870, which led to the founding of the National Council of Congregational churches in Oberlin, Ohio, in 1871.*

who are worthy of such parentage; friends of uprightness and moral virtue in society. They erected and supported the house of God in their midst, and with their families regularly frequented it on the Sabbath; good citizens, loving and working for the common welfare, as involving their own best interests. He was a plain man, with simple tastes, quick sensibilities in respect to his rights and opinions, and firm in his views; not easily turned from his convictions when once formed, nor could he be convinced by argument unless there was logic in the reasoning, and even then prejudice was not easily overcome. He stood by established and conservative things, as they had been, and as he wanted them to continue to be. If the majority were against him, he still remained the same, and yet he was as true to his friends as tho they held his opinions." They had:

REV. JAMES THURSTON[6] (James,[5] James,[4] Abner,[3] James,[2] Daniel[1]), eldest son of Rev. James and Elizabeth (Peabody) Thurston of Exeter, N. H.; born in Newmarket, N. H., Dec. 11, 1806; married, Sept. 11, 1844, ELIZABETH AUSTIN, daughter of Hon. William and Charlotte (Williams) Austin of Charlestown, Mass. He died Jan. 13, 1872, aged 65.

Mr. Thurston fitted for college at Phillips academy, Exeter, and graduated at Harvard 1829; taught three years in the English high school in Boston; graduated at the Divinity school at Cambridge 1835; went west one year; ordained over the Unitarian society in Windsor, Vt., 1838; Nov. 15, 1844, he took charge of the first Congregational society in Billerica, Mass., and remained till May 15, 1850; in South Natick two years; installed over the Allen street church in Cambridge, Mass., 1853; resigned 1854; stated supply in Lunenburg, Mass., 1855; two years at Leicester, Mass. The state of his health unfitting him for ministerial duties, he became agent of the Massachusetts Temperance Society. After the war of the rebellion he was sent by the Memorial Society to Wilmington, N. C., and for some months took charge of a school for freedmen. At a meeting of the New England Historic Genealogical Society held at Boston, Sept. 4, 1867, he read a paper on the condition of the south since the war of the rebellion, giving his own experience of seven months in Virginia, North and South Carolina. The last eight years of his life he spent in West Newton, Mass. At his funeral eight classmates walked in front of the coffin, as it was taken to the church, among them Rev. Samuel F. Smith, Rev. James Freeman Clarke, and Samuel May jr. The entire population were sincere mourners, as he had endeared himself to all by his upright life, steadfast friendship, and amiable disposition.

CALEB THURSTON[6] of South Boston, Mass. (Caleb,[5] Caleb,[4] Abner,[3] James,[2] Daniel[1]), second child of Caleb and Nancy (Wiggins) Thurston of Monmouth, Me.; born in Newmarket, N. H., April 9, 1802; married, Dec. 4, 1826, JANE SARGENT, born in Peterboro, N. H., Dec. 10, 1801, daughter of Henry Sargent of Halifax, N. S. She died Aug. 14, 1875; he died Sept. 22, 1875.

Mr. Thurston was a man of great energy of character, and built up a large business in heavy trucking in South Boston and Boston, Mass., in which he accumulated a competency. It was interesting, and often collected quite a company to see him manage with his simple voice his team, consisting of ten or more horses, moving a large boiler or heavy machinery. He understood his horses and they seemed to understand him perfectly. He never used the whip, but when he spoke the word, not with harshness, but in an encouraging, friendly tone, every animal in the long team would put forth his full strength in a determined and steady effort to move the load — no jerking or kicking out — if the load moved, it went smoothly, and if it did not, they were ready for another try.

SAMUEL ROYAL THURSTON[6] (Trueworthy,[5] Caleb,[4] Abner,[3] James,[2] Daniel[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of Trueworthy and Priscilla (Royal) Thurston of Peru, Me.; born in Monmouth, Me., April 17, 1816; married, July 28, 1844, ELIZABETH F. MCCLENCH, born Dec. 22, 1816, daughter of John and Sarah McClench of Fayette, Me. He died April 9, 1851.

Mr. Thurston was with his father in Peru on the farm till seventeen years of age, when an injury changed his plans for life. He fitted for college at the Maine Wesleyan seminary, Readfield, Me.; entered Dartmouth college in the freshman class, and in 1840 left there and entered Bowdoin as a sophomore, and graduated in 1843. He read law with Hon. Robert P. Dunlap of Brunswick, Me., and practiced there till 1845, when he went to Burlington, then the territory of Iowa, and practiced law and edited the Gazette, a leading democratic paper. The climate did not agree with him, and March 24, 1847, having bought a team of five yokes of oxen, two cows, and a horse, took his wife, and child three months old in a wagon, and with goad in hand drove that team two thousand, four hundred miles, arriving in Oregon City, in the valley of the Willamette river, Oregon, Sept. 13, 1847. At this time the U. S. mail was received but once a year, and two merchant ships came once a year from Boston, and the vessels of the Hudson Bay Company were the only means by which letters could be sent, or passage had. With the advent of territorial jurisdiction came a monthly line of steamers in 1850. He practided law, was elected to the legislature 1848; elected the first representative to congress from the territory of Oregon, 1849. On the 6th of August he started for Washington, D. C., in a boat propelled by Indians on the Columbia river, and arrived in San Francisco on the 18th; left San Francisco, Oct. 1st, Panama, 25th, and Chagres, 29th, in the steamship Empire City, bound to New York, where he arrived Nov. 13. He paid a flying visit to his relatives in Maine, and arrived in Washington on the last day of November. His course in congress was marked by fidelity to his adopted state and the country and with honor to himself. He was a democrat in politics, but in his letters home he writes, "It was a time of sectional strife, and I saw at once that I must unite and combine strength from all. I therefore shut up the book of partisan politics and opened one in which the whig and the democrat, the freesoiler, the northern man and the southern man, could read in harmony. Pursuing this course, I may say, and I trust it will not be immodest in me, I have the respect and confidence of all parties in Congress. And when my measures came to the test I had the pleasure of witnessing, practically, the success of the policy my judgment had dictated. My political notions are well understood; they have been cherished from my boyhood, and I am ready to defend them on all proper occasions. I shall ever take good care not to obtrude them on persons or bodies to the detriment of those measures I am seeking for Oregon. . . . I say it to you, and I shall say it aloud, if need be, I make no compromise with any man who desires Oregon to become a slave country. Dear as my reputation, enticing as are the allurements of popular favor, and as closely as Oregon is allied to me, I would lose all, forsake all, abandon all, before I would compromise with slavery in Oregon. Nail this flag to the masthead, and let it be lowered only with the shivering of the mast."

He died April 9, 1851, on board the steamer California, on his way home, and was buried in Acapulco, Mexico. Yet he died not alone or unattended; he had in his charge a company of young women, teachers whom Gov. Slade of Vermont was sending to Oregon, who now became his tender nurses, and when they had closed his eyes forever, treasured up every word that could be of interest to his bereaved wife and friends. The legislature of Oregon in 1853 voted to remove his remains from foreign soil, and they were deposited in the cemetery in Salem, Ore., and in 1856 a monument was erected by the same authority on the eastern face of which is inscribed "Thurston — erected by the people of Oregon."

He was in all relations ambitious, resolute and determined, fond of debate and vigorous in defense of his points. His 4th of July address of 1849 will be long remembered by those who heard it. He was kind to his friends and magnanimous to all; a sincere christian, humble and earnest in the prayer-meeting as he was bold and defiant in debate. He made his way by hard and faithful work, attained success, and left an honored memory.

His widow married, Oct. 16, 1855, Hon. William Holman Odell, born Dec. 25, 1830, son of John and Sarah (Holman) Odell of Carroll Co., Ind., who was one of the presidential electors of 1876, from Salem, Oregon. She died March 31, 1890.

HENRY THURSTON[6] (Gates,[5] Peter,[4] Abner,[3] James,[2] Daniel[1]), son of Gates and Elizabeth (Pollard) Thurston of Lancaster, Mass.; born there Aug. 19, 1792; married, July 17, 1815, AURELIA WARREN, born in Amenia, Dutchess county, N. Y., April 12, 1794. Her father, James Warren, purchased a large tract of land near Lake George, N. Y., and removed to it in 1804. He died in early life, and his friends, in respect to him, gave the name of Warrensburg to the place of his residence and of Warren to the county. Mr. Thurston was a noted hotel keeper, commencing at the Warren House in Warrensburg at the time of his marriage. From there he went to the Lake House, Lake George, then to Glen Falls; Waterford; Troy; and in 1831 took the Merchants Hotel, 108 and 110 Broad st., New York city, N. Y., the second largest house in the city at that time, which he kept till 1834, when he moved to Lancaster, Mass., and in December, 1837, he opened the Rockford House, in Rockford, Ill., the first hotel erected in Winnebago county. He was in the battle of Plattsburg in 1813, and after was captain of a rifle company in Warren county, N. Y. An ardent democrat, he was one of the committee from the first ward in New York to receive President Jackson in 1832. He died at Lancaster, while on a visit there, Sept. 30, 1842; his widow died at Troy, N. Y., Jan. 26, 1847.

JOHN GATES THURSTON[6] (Gates,[5] Peter,[4] Abner,[3] James,[2] Daniel[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of Gates and Elizabeth (Pollard) Thurston of South Lancaster, Mass.; born there March 18, 1794; married, June 5, 1828, HARRIET PATRICK LEE, born Nov. 5, 1805, daughter of Seth and Anna (Patrick) Lee, a lawyer of Barre, Mass. He became insane and died March 27, 1873; she died March 6, 1878.

Mr. Thurston spent nearly all his life in his native town, tho he had traveled extensively in the United States, and visited Europe in 1869. He was in Italy during Louis Napoleon's Franco-Austrian campaign, and visited the battle-field of Magenta shortly after the battle; after which he accompanied a portion of the French army to Milan, the soldiers treating him and his companion (Edward A. Raymond of Boston) with great courtesy, and carrying their valises for them. He was so exhausted by the tramp that Raymond said he slept forty hours. He held many positions of public trust and responsibility; was an "old line whig" and an earnest politician; sat many terms in the legislature (both houses); was town clerk for fifteen consecutive years; bank director for many years. He was in mercantile life for more than forty years, having the largest store in the county. They celebrated their silver wedding in 1853, at the same time as the celebration of the bi-centennial anniversary of the incorporation of the town of Lancaster.

WILDER STODDARD THURSTON[6] (Gates,[5] Peter,[4] Abner,[3] James,[2] Daniel[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of Gates and Elizabeth (Pollard), Thurston of South Lancaster, Mass.; born there Oct. 8, 1806; married, Oct. 27, 1836, ROSANNA MILLICENT (LAWRENCE) PEIRCE, born 1817, daughter of Jacob Peirce, a farmer of Woburn, Mass. She died Dec. 14, 1846; second, Sept. 28, 1848, CAROLINE M. LAUGHTON; she died Nov. 2, 1849; third, Sept. 29, 1852, SUSAN DODGE of Shirley, Mass., born March 3, 1814. He died Feb. 24, 1883.

Mr. Thurston was baptized by the name of Sampson Wilder Thurston, named for the somewhat noted Sampson Vining Stoddard Wilder, who was once a resident of Bolton, Mass. The name was afterward changed to its present form by act of legislature. He was a wholesale dry goods merchant in Boston from 1825 for fifteen years; 1840 he returned to Lancaster, opened a country store, which he carried on till 1857, when he moved to Lynn, Mass., and continued his mercantile life till 1872, when, having become largely interested in real estate, he retired from other business. He was a man of influence in his native place, having been selectman, postmaster, and justice of the peace. From 1845 to 1855 he took a deep interest in political matters connected with the "American" party. He was nominated for congress by them, and was a member of their state and national conventions.

Children.

3633 Clara Wilder,[7] b. in Boston, June 19, 1838; was educated for a teacher, graduating at the State Normal school in Framingham, Mass.; m., in Lynn, Oct. 30, 1862, Thomas E. Fry of Bolton. They lived for three years in Brooklyn, N. Y., and then removed to Chicago, Ill., as fire underwriter, under the firm name of Hammond & Fry. They were completely stripped of all their household possessions by the great fire of Oct. 8, 9, 1871. They have:

3634 Thomas Wilder (Fry), b. in New York city, Sept. 23, 1863.

3635 Russell Gates,[7] b. in Lancaster, May 29, 1840; d. April 17, 1841.

3636 Louise Millicent,[7] b. Sept. 19, 1842; was asst. in one of the Boston high schools; since 1887 resides in Winchester, Mass.; n.m.

3637 Ellen Elizabeth,[7] b. March 31, 1845; went to Chicago with her sister, Mrs. Fry, in 1865, and was employed as cashier and cor. sec. in the music store of Root & Cady; m., in Lynn, Aug. 27, 1868, Myron Leonard of Middletown, Vt.; in Indianapolis, Ind., 1874 to 1876; now confidential clerk in an agricultural implement store in Chicago. They had:

3638 Frederick Thurston (Leonard), b. June 26, d. Sept. 16, 1869.

3639 Elsa (Leonard), b. Aug. 16, 1872.

3640 Ernest Wilder (Leonard), b. May 3, d. Aug. 1, 1874.

3641 Lois Russell (Leonard), b. Nov. 11, d. Dec. 22, 1875.

3641*a* Walter Clarence (Leonard), b. Aug. 6, d. Oct. 2, 1881.

All three of the daughters have been somewhat given to writing for various publications, mostly juvenile, and the two older have published some books for children. It was an amusing coincidence that the two having written, unknown to each other, the one in Chicago, the other in Lynn, story books in answer to an offer of three prizes for suitable Sunday-school books, by the American Unitarian Association, two of the prizes fell to them. Their names and residences being different, the awarders had little suspicion that two prizes went to the same family.

JANE THURSTON[6] (Moses,[5] Moses,[4] Moses,[3] Stephen,[2] Daniel[1]), sister of the preceding, and daughter of Moses and Jane (Spaulding) Thurston of Orange, Vt.; born there about 1783; married, first, 1803, ANDREW GARDNER, who died 1804; second, in Lebanon, 1806, ELIAS HURD, born May 5, 1787, son of Ebenezer and Abigail (Kempton) Hurd of East Haddam, Conn. He died in Chest, Clearfield Co., Pa., 1862; she died 1845.

Mr. Hurd was a carpenter and wheelwright in Lebanon, N. H., till 1811, when they moved to Orange, Vt.; he enlisted and served a year in the war of 1812. They moved to Danville, Vt., and in 1828 he deserted his wife with eleven children, very poor, and went to Chest, Clearfield Co., Pa. Noah Bishop aided in maintaining the family, secured good places for the children, and then took Mrs. Hurd to Canada, where he gained some property. Had one child born to them, Lorenzo (Bishop), a deaf mute, whom they sent to an institution, where he learned to read some and write, but was not contented, and left and learned shoemaking; has since died. During this time Elias Hurd came to Hartford, Vt., married a widow Dow, lived with her two or three years, and left her as suddenly as he did his first wife, and went back to Pennsylvania. Mr. Bishop, becoming unable to work thro rheumatism, returned to Newport with Jane and their son Lorenzo, who had come to man's estate. Elias comes too, and takes Jane and Lorenzo away with him to Pennsylvania, leaving Mr. Bishop heartbroken and forlorn, who soon put an end to his existence rather than become a town pauper.

3671 John Louis Hurd (Mosher), b. in Derby, May 28, 1833; m., Oct. 15, 1854, Miranda Louise Fisher, b. Dec. 13, 1835, da. of William Bennett [of Walpole, Mass., and Harriet Maria (Linnel) [of Hyannis, Mass.] Fisher of New York city. Until 17 years of age he was not aware of the trouble that caused the divorce of his parents, and was known by his step-father's name; he then took his mother's maiden name of Hurd, for the great love he had for her, till he became of age, when he dropped the h and added an i, making his name Mosier. Being left to care for himself at the age of 12, he turned his hand to farming, was driver on the Erie canal, a sailor, rising to be 2d mate, etc. In 1850 he apprenticed himself to a blacksmith. In 1860 he went to take charge of a carriage manufactory in South Carolina. The firm was called upon to make a secession flag, and he was deputized to make it, as the only one capable, and in three days he had completed the task, and the first secession flag was flung to the breeze. From motives of policy he assisted in the formation of a rebel regiment, but declined a position in it. Being familiar with military tactics as a member of the 71st N. Y. reg. N. G. for 7 years, he was compelled to instruct and drill the infantry and cavalry regiments. Some loyal remarks made by a workman who came with him from New York were attributed to him, and, entirely without his knowledge, he was tried by a civil court, a court martial, and the committee of safety, found guilty by each and sentenced to be hung. The mob came to execute the sentence, when, by sharp diplomacy and a liberal use of whiskey, he secured a respite for a day. During the night, by the aid of friends, he boarded a northern-bound train after it was in motion, and made his escape. In July, 1863, he commenced work with Brewster & Co., a large carriage mnfg. firm in New York city. He has worked his way up to be foreman of the smiths' shop employing 160 men, and to be president of the Brewster & Co. Mut. Benefit Asso. of New York city. Carr says: "In regard to my mother, there is perhaps no one great thing to record, for her life was made up of beautiful littles. Married at the age of sixteen, the mother of fifteen children, with all the perplexities and inconveniences that limited means and a life of toil would bring, she was never known to wear other than a cheerful face, and her morning smile and greeting to all is remembered as a household benediction. Her word was law, and the christian precept of love and kindness was lived out in her life at home and in the community where she dwelt. In my recollection there were times when she had but one calico dress suitable to appear before company in, and on one occasion company came on washing day, before the dress was brought from the laundry. Some of the older girls entertained the guests, while others ironed the garment, attired their mother, and in her best cap and sweetest smile of welcome she entered the room and performed in a queenly manner the part of hostess, obliging her guests to admit afterward 'the best visit we ever had.' She lived to see more prosperous days, her husband having nearly paid up for two fine farms. And when told that she must die, she said, 'I would be glad to live to see the final payment made, but the Lord's will be done,' and in her last hours her prayer was, 'Wash me, make me pure, let me go to Jesus.' A more devoted wife and mother never lived, and in heaven we believe that she awaits the coming of our feet." They had, born in Corinth:

He was wounded in the head and lost a thumb by the bursting of his gun; discharged with honors, and received one hundred and sixty acres of government land. He was captain of militia for several years after the war in Washington, Vt.; moved to Danville, Vt., and from there to Indian Stream, now Pittsburg, N. H., where he took up new land, and built a comfortable and pleasant home. In 1835 he moved to Avon, Me., bought a farm in an almost unbroken forest. By hard work on the part of all the family he made a nice and happy home. He was an industrious and honest man, a member of the Free Baptist church in Vermont and the Methodist in Maine. Mrs. Thurston had great power of endurance, and brought up her children to be patient and strictly honest in all things. The wolves were very numerous and troublesome, killing many sheep and frightening the people. As he and his wife were coming home from a visit to a neighbor's one evening, on an ox sled, he made a noise like a wolf, and a whole pack came running after them into the very door-yard. Moose and deer were plenty there in those days. He came very near being drowned twice, once in Lake Champlain, by breaking thro the ice, when walking, and again with a two-horse team and his wife, in the Connecticut river.

Alexander James Dallas Thurston[6] (Daniel,[5] Daniel,[4] Nathaniel,[3] Stephen,[2] Daniel[1]), eldest child of Daniel and Eliza (Chilcott) Thurston of Aurora, Erie Co., N. Y.; born there June 19, 1820; married, June 1, 1852, Sallie Watson McClain, daughter of Col. Alfred and Harriet (Robertson) [of Virginia parentage] McClain of Green Hill, Tenn.; born there Aug. 14, 1835; a Presbyterian in religion; she died in Humboldt, Tenn., Dec. 26, 1874.

Mr. Thurston was educated for the law, and practiced for a time in Mt. Clemons, Mich., but not liking it became, in 1844, a surveyor and civil engineer, and surveyed public lands in the northern peninsula of Michigan for the United States. December, 1845, went to Nashville, Tenn., and practiced the same till early in 1850, when he went into the wholesale and retail dry goods trade in Nashville. His wife owned forty-six slaves. He turned his attention to planting, purchased 1,940 acres of land in Chicot Co., Arkansas, and 3,600 more in Red River Co., Texas, bought forty-one more slaves, and placed all on the Red River plantation, still continuing his dry goods business till March, 1861. He recruited an artillery regiment of 1,756 men for five years, or during the war, for the rebel army, and served as colonel of the same under Generals "Stonewall" Jackson, Ewell and Longstreet, all under Robert E. Lee, commander-in-chief of the Confederate States army, participating in all the great battles of Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania, until April 9, 1865, when Gen. Lee surrendered his army to Gen. Grant. In 1878 he removed to Seymour, Ind., "broken physically and financially," and in religion Unitarian. He was a man of 5 feet, 6 inches, 125 pounds; black hair and eyes. His wife was a blonde. AMOS BROWN THURSTON[6] (Thomas,[5] Daniel,[4] Nathaniel,[3] Stephen,[2] Daniel[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of Thomas and Electa (Willcox) Thurston of Aurora, Erie Co., N. Y.; born there July 5, 1823; married, April 22, 1851, ELIZA JEANETTE MOORE, born July 15, 1833, daughter of Reuben and Sarah (Griffin) Moore of Hamburg, N. Y. He died Jan. 12, 1888.

Mr. Thurston was a farmer in Grass Lake, Mich., in 1852 moved to Pontiac, in 1855 moved back to Grass Lake, and in 1862 to Grand Rapids, Mich. He enlisted in the 6th Michigan cavalry in the war against the rebellion, served nine months, became disabled by sickness, and was discharged, during which time his family moved to East Hamburg, N. Y., and in 1877 to Buffalo. His daughter writes: "He was 6 feet, 1 inch in height, straight as a pine tree; dark complexion, high broad forehead, originally dark now gray hair; small bright eyes, changing from gray to black, with eyelids slightly drooping at the corners; stern, quick-tempered, but generous and forgiving. In his youth and early manhood very fond of hunting — being the crack shot of the region. Unlike his brothers he preferred the shooting match to the dance; independent almost to a fault, regarding no man as his superior. In politics an outright Republican. Liked plain talk, but was fond of a joke. My mother is of medium height, and in her younger days was one of the country beauties; dark hair, fair complexion, rosy cheeks, and blue eyes, proud, high-spirited, ambitious, with a talent for writing, drawing and fancy work, and is a member of the Congregational church."

Children.

4317 Cyrenus Erastus,[7] b. Dec. 14, 1852; worked on his father's farm as long as he lived. Resembled his father in looks, tall, square built, dark complexion, high broad forehead, small, dark gray eyes, full of mischief, long face, thin lips, square chin, with a deep dimple, quick-tempered, generous, steady and faithful; d. April 26, 1876; n.m.

4318 Albert Amos,[7] b. May 22, 1854; in looks and character resembled his mother, 5 feet 10 inches in height, stout build, fair complexion, blue eyes, dark hair, slight brown moustache, strictly honest, very saving, quiet, reserved and stubborn. At the age of 18 worked for a milkman in Buffalo, N. Y., and in a few years bought a milk route, and continued the business till Nov., 1881, when he was appointed to a position on the police, and in 1888 was made sergeant of the force; a Democrat in politics; m., Nov. 17, 1884, Ann Haley, b. in Buffalo, N. Y.; she is a Catholic. He was run over by an engine and killed, Jan. 12, 1889. They have:

4322 James Francis,[8] b. July 9, 1889.

4323 Flora May,[7] b. Aug. 23, 1856; resembles both her parents in both looks and character; dark brown hair, small features, round face with dimples in the cheeks; a laborious and faithful worker in her parents' household, being oftentimes the mainstay; much interested in the Thurston Genealogy, and taking great pains to elaborate her family history; n.m.

4324 Cora Olive,[7] b. July 9, 1867; tall, fair, blue eyes, light brown hair, oval face, dimpled chin; quick-tempered, independent, generous, and loving her friends almost to idolatry, she became endeared to them in an unusual degree; d. of consumption, Oct. 30, 1881; n.m.

REV. THOMAS GAIRDNER THURSTON[7] (Asa,[6] Thomas,[5] John,[4] Jonathan,[3] Daniel,[2] Daniel[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of Rev. Asa and Lucy (Goodale) Thurston of the Sandwich Islands; born there May 9, 1836; married, first, at the Hawaiian Islands, Oct. 25, 1866, HARRIET FRANCES RICHARDSON, born Aug. 31, 1838, daughter of Samuel and Hannah (Towle) Richardson of Maine; she died at Grass Valley, Cal., May 25, 1872. Second, in Albany, N. Y., May 13, 1875, ALICE GASKING, b. June 7, 1846, daughter of George and Alice (Black) Gasking of Rhinebeck, N. Y.

Mr. Thurston graduated from Yale 1862, and from Union theological seminary in 1865; ordained by presbytery in Hawaiian Islands in 1866; 1879, preaching in Taylorsville, N. C., where he, as principal, and his wife, as assistant, were teaching an academy for boys and girls; 1884 he divided his time between the Presbyterian churches in Taylorsville and Hickory, residing in the latter place. He was also principal of the Hickory Highland academy, a school for boys. February 22, 1884, on his way to Taylorsville to preach, in company with his daughter, when attempting to ford the Catawba river, they were both drowned. At the funeral the business of the town was stopped, and the whole community was stirred with sympathy. He was a spiritually minded man, earnest and untiring in his duties. It is said he never failed to meet an appointment, whatever the weather, always managing to be where the few were gathered together to worship. She still continues to teach in Hickory.

TIMOTHY APPLETON CHAPMAN of Milwaukee, Wis., son of George Whitefield and Mary (Greenwood) Chapman of Gilead, Me.; born there May 23, 1824; married, in Boston, Mass., April 16, 1850, LAURA BOWKER, born July 22, 1828, daughter of David and Eunice (Clapp) Bowker of Scituate, Mass.

During his boyhood he assisted his father upon the farm; was educated at the district school of his native town and at the academies of Bethel and Yarmouth, Me., and engaged in teaching. He was an ambitious boy, and would never allow himself to be outdone, as an anecdote best illustrates. His brother far excelled him in singing, do what he might, so at the age of fifteen he procured a violin, and in six weeks' time was drawing the bow in the village choir to the admiration of the audience, and, as we imagine, somewhat to the astonishment of the staid adviser, who told him in the beginning that if he could play psalm tunes in church in two years' time he would do well. This characteristic has followed him thro all his pursuits to the present time, and is one of the elements of his success. At the age of twenty, with less than ten dollars in his purse, he went to Boston. He soon entered the dry goods store of C. F. Hovey & Co. as clerk, and served in that capacity for six years. In 1850, thro the encouragement of James M. Beebe, he, with his brother Hannibal, opened a dry goods store on Hanover street, Boston, under the firm name of T. A. & H. G. Chapman. For seven years here and on Tremont street, they carried on the business with but little success except that they established a reputation for capacity and integrity. Observing the power of capital invested in the dry goods business in the east, he determined to make his future experiments in the west. In 1857, he went to Milwaukee, and with the assistance of C. F. Hovey & Co. established himself in business on East Water street, under the firm name of Hasset & Chapman. Mr. Hasset retired at the end of five years, and was succeeded by Mr. Charles Endicott, ho remained three years, since which time Mr. Chapman has been one. With goods of the first quality, selected with refined and ed-:ated taste, with system and good order in his establishment and ith the rule of one price, his patronage very soon exceeded his :pectations. The city grew and rival houses rose, but he maintained s supremacy. In 1872, he built one of the largest dry goods houses the northwest, on the corner of Milwaukee and Wisconsin streets. ı 1883, finding his business still increasing, he added another store : the same frontage as the one he built, thus nearly doubling the ısiness area. Here Mr. Chapman studied in every way to secure ıe health and comfort of his employés, no less than the convenience : his patrons, and introduced many ornamental and artistic features ıat rendered the store attractive.

In 1885, the store, including its entire contents, was burned to the :ound, a total loss of property amounting to nearly seven hundred ıousand dollars. Mr. Chapman, being only partially insured, sus-.ined a heavy loss, but not enough to cripple him. Mr. Chapman's :perience was at this time unique. The destruction of his store as regarded by the people of Milwaukee as a public calamity. It as realized at this time, when he threatened to retire from business, hat his influence had been in their midst. His employés implored im with tears to build again, even offering in many cases to work ır him without wages till he should be re-established in his own store. [any of his customers in the city besought him with scarcely less ırnestness and feeling than did his clerks, to build again. Petitions ere sent, signed by prominent and leading ladies of the neighbor-.g cities and towns, praying him to rebuild and continue in business, so from leading firms throughout the country came prompt tele-·ams expressing sympathy, and offering financial assistance if eeded, and when he decided to rebuild, his movements were watched ith eager and enthusiastic interest. In the new building he took .easure in reproducing many features of the old store that had so ell answered the needs of his business; but experience enabled im to improve in many ways upon his former ideas. The result was light, convenient, well-ventilated store — with an area on the ground oor of over seventeen thousand square feet — a harmonious and ·tistic building in which Milwaukee may well take pride, for it is onceded to be the most perfect retail dry goods store of its size in ıe world. The business prosperity, that received a new impetus at .at time, has been steadily increasing, until now the number of his nployés, including their families, exceeds the entire population of ilead, his birthplace.

For some years past Mr. Chapman has been improving the home-ead farm in Gilead. Bringing to the subject his usual enthusiasm, : has become much interested in scientific farming, and has already ade great changes in the place. He has written some able papers lating to the causes of the decadence of Maine farms, and indicat-g the remedy. In answer to an attack upon one of these papers : also wrote a strong article on the tariff, that has been widely com-ented upon. Mr. Chapman is an original thinker, a man of posi-ve convictions and ideas, despising cant in all things, and showing his character and ability more in what he does than in what he says. In his pursuit of wealth, as we have already indicated, he has not been unmindful of the comfort and happiness of his employés and members of his family who have been less successful than himself; nor has he been lacking in public spirit. At the present day any leading enterprise that would be successful seeks to claim Mr. Chapman's commendation. His name is considered by the people as an assurance that any undertaking with which it is connected will be carried thro successfully, with taste and thoroughness, and without sham. He is not content with a superficial knowledge of any subject, but goes to the root of the matter. His present influential position was not attained by luck — it is the direct result of this principle carried out in his business. His life illustrates the success an ambitious man of high moral aims may achieve in a good field by self-reliance, sound judgment, persevering industry, strict integrity, and a determination to know the reason of things. He was loyal during the rebellion, and sent a substitute into the army. He has always voted the republican ticket, but is no politician — desires no office. He was offered the nomination for governor of Wisconsin in 1888, but declined. If Milwaukee is marked by a higher and purer practice than the average of large cities, it is due as much to the example and influence of T. A. Chapman as to any other man.

Mrs. Chapman is a woman of education, refinement, culture, and the higher social qualities. She is deservedly esteemed by the purest and best people in the city, and maintains a position of rare elevation by dignity of character, intelligence, and true moral worth.

HIRAM THURSTON[7] (Thomas,[6] Thomas,[5] Abner,[4] Abner,[3] James,[2] Daniel[1]), son of Thomas and Clarissa B. (Kimball) Thurston of Readfield, Me.; born there Oct. 1, 1820; married, in Boston, Mass., June 16, 1844, HARRIET NEWELL HAYWARD, born in Troy, Vt., May 1826, daughter of Harry and Lucy (Sterling) Hayward.

Mr. Thurston is a carpenter, millwright, and stationary engineer in berlin, Ohio; worked with his father in Readfield, at the carpenter nd joiner trade, and attained such education as the town schools af-ɔrded, till he was twenty-one, when he went to Boston, Mass., to purıe his trade; found an estimable companion for life, married and ɛt up housekeeping in Cambridgeport, Mass.; 1845 moved to Readeld, built a house and shop under one roof, was burnt out, only esaping in their night-clothes, thus losing all he had accumulated.
Iis father aided him to rebuild. In 1849 he moved to Bath, Me., ɔ superintend repairs upon the Kennebec & Portland railroad. In 851 the "California fever" raged throughout the country; he be-ame a victim of it, and took his family to Barre, Vt., where her parnts resided; she started the millinery business (the thrifty helpmeet ıat she was), and he started for California with an empty purse but brave heart. He shipped for the voyage from New York to Cha-res on the Ohio, of the George Law line of steamers, as carpenter.
.t Chagres he started for Panama on an "old tub of a steamoat" up the Chagres river, that could not make headway against the ırrent, so took a boat and poled up the river, and finished the route cross the isthmus on mules. Found the steamer for San Francisco ad just sailed; obtained work at his trade in Panama at five dollars day for two weeks, waiting for the next steamer. On Christmas ay of 1851 sailed on the ship Northerner, and arrived at San Fran-
.sco, Jan. 1, 1852. Soon started on foot, as he was in haste, tho
ıe stage went the same route, and worked three months on a flume ɔr the Toulumne Water and Ditch Co. In June, same year, went to Stanislaus river and made about fifteen dollars a day. Found plenty of work but many hardships; snow eight feet deep, threatening starvation, flour being eighty-four dollars per one hundred pounds, and no way to obtain any supplies except by foot carriage thro the deep snow.

He returned home after two years' absence, with two thousand dollars, with which he purchased a house in Montpelier, Vt. In 1858 he moved to Elyria, O., and started a sash and blind mill; was burnt out in 1859, losing all again. Rebuilt by the aid of the citizens and ran it a year, when he moved to Sullivan, O., to manufacture shingles.

When the rebellion broke out he recruited a number of men, and enlisted in the 2d Ohio cavalry drilled in Camp Chase, Columbus, O.; did scout duty in Platte City, Mo.; organized an Indian regiment near Fort Smith in the Indian Ter. In 1863 was attached to Burnside's command in Kentucky; detailed to follow the rebel Morgan on his raid into Ohio, and captured him. The hard marches and field duty were too much for his health, and he broke down. After recovery was detailed to repair bridges and mills which the rebels had destroyed, thus using his mechanical skill to good advantage for the government. His term of service expired in the fall of 1864, and broken in health he settled his family in Oberlin, O., and engaged in the manufacture of shingles till his health gave way entirely.

In 1883 he secured three hundred and sixty acres of government land in Dakota under the homestead and preëmption law, and in 1888 returned to Oberlin, where he still lives, tho a confirmed paralytic, the result of his hard experiences in the army. His wife has proved herself a true helpmeet, enduring the hardships and long separations from him with faithfulness and fortitude, caring well for her household. He attributes whatever of success in life, as well as the character and manhood he possesses to her faithful devotion, exemplary conduct, and steady and persistent piety. Both members of the Episcopal church.

JOSHUA TENNEY THURSTON[7] (Sampson,[6] Moses,[5] Moses,[4] Moses,[3] Stephen,[2] Daniel[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of Sampson and Hannah (Payne) Thurston of Avon, Me.; born in Orange, Vt., July 19, 1818; married, first, in Avon, May 5, 1842, SALLY VINING, born in Lewiston, Me., Sept. 8, 1814; she died April 23, 1880. Second, Nov. 21, 1880, MRS. ELIZABETH (WALLACE) PARK, born July 19, 1831. Her first husband was H. H. Park, who died in the war against the rebellion.

Mr. Thurston was a farmer and stock raiser in Ord, Neb., 1880. He resided about twenty years in Richford, Wis., and did much toward building up that place. Both members of the Methodist church, and he mostly supported the preaching and Sunday-school; was a class leader and steward of the church. He owned a large farm, well fenced with cedar, large barn, and good house, with all conveniences and comforts, and taking the "Western fever" in the spring of 1872, started for the west with a team, and was joined at Rome, Wis., by his son-in-law Frank Gifford. They traveled to Deer

Lodge, Montana, where Gifford sold out his interest in the team and outfit to his father-in-law, and returned home. Mr. Thurston continued on to Oregon, Washington, and back to Utah, where he sold his team and outfit, and returned home, but not to be contented, for his children were in Nebraska. He subsequently sold his comfortable home at a great sacrifice, and went there, too. The second year of his life in Ord he had two spans of horses stolen by the famous "Doc. Middleton" gang of horse thieves that infested Nebraska, who were captured a few years later, his crops were destroyed by the grasshoppers, — but is not sorry he located there. His second marriage was not a happy one, and they are divorced. 1891 settled in Wilber, Neb., where he has property. Mrs. Gifford says, "Of my mother I cannot speak too highly. Coming to Wisconsin when the country was new, and her children small, she had to endure many privations and hardships, which she bore with patience, true christian fortitude, and trust in Christ as her Saviour. She was always cheerful, and beloved by all. Her house was always a home for the minister. She had been a member of the church for more than fifty years, and died in the triumphs of faith."

Children, born in Avon.

4906 Ahaz,[8] b. March 1, 1843; entered the war against the rebellion and was in the following battles, a record of which he made upon the fly-leaves of his pocket Bible: Gainsville, Aug. 28, 1862; Bull Run, Aug. 30 and Sept. 1 and 2; South Mountain, Sept. 12, Antietam, Sept. 17, 1862; Gettysburg, July 1, 2, 3, 1863; Fredericksburg, Dec. 13, and second battle May 1, 2, 3, and was killed in the Battle of the Wilderness, May 5, 1864.

4907 Maria,[8] b. Jan. 5, 1845; m., in Rome, Jefferson Co., Wis., Aug. 20, 1865, Francis Marion Gifford, b. in Harbor Creek, Penn., Dec. 15, 1842, son of James Murray [b. Dec. 21, 1800] and Prudence (Hemmenway) [b. Dec. 22, 1803, d. March 4, 1865] Gifford; he was a farmer in Rome, his father living with him 1880; moved, in the spring of 1881, to Wright Co., Minn., and Dec., 1881, to Royalton, Wis., where he has stock in the Wolf River Mnfg. Co., for the manufacture of chairs and other furniture; 1884 moved to a farm in Ord, Neb.; she is a member of the Methodist church. Have:

4910 Frank Thurston (Gifford), b. May 24, 1879.

4911 Eugene,[8] b. June 16, 1848; d. in Buffalo, Wis., Feb. 20, 1853.

4912 Herbert,[8] b. Aug. 14, 1849; m., June 3, 1871, Almena Holcomb, b. May 18, 1852, da. of Joseph Lyman Holcomb of Coloma, Wis., who was killed at the battle of Pittsburg Landing in the war against the rebellion, leaving a wife and seven daughters. Herbert was a blacksmith in Ord, where he went in 1873, driving the whole distance with his private team. In 1879 he was elected sheriff of Valley county, re-elected 1881 and 1883; since 1885 a blacksmith in Hay Springs, Neb. They have:

4913 Mary Olla,[9] b. in Ord, Sept. 17, 1873; m., 1890, Charles Carrol, b. May 22, 1866, son of William and Julia (Stallman) Carrol of Segel, Penn.; he is a blacksmith and farmer near Hay Springs.

roads or bridges then, no work to be had on arriving; the grasshoppers destroyed their crops; lightning and disease took some of their cattle; the nearest store and post-office was 25 miles away; this was pioneer life in earnest. She is a member of the Methodist church. She says she stayed alone a week after they arrived in Nebraska with her sister-in-law's children while her husband and his sister went to Grand Island for provisions; their nearest neighbor was five miles away. Twice Mr. Collins had been called up in the night and traveled 20 miles on foot to fight Indians, only to find they had done the mischief and left; 1882 a railroad was building across their farm. They have:

4918 Oscar Ernest (Collins), b. in Newton, Wis., April 11, 1870.
4919 Carrie Maria (Collins), b. in Ord, Jan. 20, 1873; in Fremont normal sch.

WILLARD THURSTON [7] (Sampson,[6] Moses,[5] Moses,[4] Moses,[3] Stephen,[2] Daniel[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of Sampson and Hannah (Payne) Thurston of Avon, Me.; born in Danville, Vt., May 19, 1826; married, Nov. 17, 1850, HESTER ANN ROGERS SYLVESTER, born Jan. 7, 1831, daughter of Maj. John and Esther (Collier) Sylvester of Avon. He was a farmer in Otsego, Wis.; went to California 1851 or 1852; was shipwrecked, and in traveling over the mountains was taken sick; his companions thought he would not live long, and left him to die, but others came along and saved his life. Enlisted in the 2d Wisconsin cavalry against the rebellion, had his horse shot and fall upon him in such a way that he could not extricate himself, and lay several hours before being relieved and taken to a hospital, and after a long illness was honorably discharged, but never fully recovered. He came to his death finally, June 28, 1873, by an apothecary putting up a poison instead of the medicine ordered. When too late to remedy the error, the apothecary came to see him, full of alarm; Mr. Thurston said, "Don't hurt him, it was a mistake." He was very liberal in his religious views, loyal to his country, and was honored by his fellow citizens, being appointed to several offices of trust.

He was son of Thomas and Hannah (Cross) Hammond, married 1784, she was daughter of Sturgis and Laura (Giddings) Penfield, who were married in 1806.

Mr. Thurston worked on his father's farm in Pelham and Enfield during most of his minority, attended the Monson academy to prepare himself for teaching, and taught winters from 1856 to 1865, in Palmer, Belchertown, Amherst grammar school and Sunderland high school. While thus engaged in Palmer, in January, 1858, he says: — "At midnight, without any previous serious thoughts, I was instantly convicted of sin against God, and after a struggle of three long hours, asked him, for Christ's sake, to pardon and use me as he pleased. In the morning, my first conviction was, I must preach the gospel, tho previously always opposed to it." He commenced preparation, in the face of many difficulties, at Williston seminary, East Hampton, Mass.; entered Amherst college in September, 1861, graduated 1865; entered Bangor theological seminay, October, 1865, and left for Andover theological seminary, May 6, 1867, and graduated in 1868. Not wishing to settle at once, he preached in East Machias, Me., from October, 1868, to December, 1869. Was installed in Sudbury, Mass., Feb. 1, 1870, Rev. J. M. Manning, D.D., of Boston, preaching the sermon; resigned, and was dismissed in October, 1874, and was installed over the "Village Church" in Boston, Dorchester district, Jan. 21, 1875, having commenced preaching there Jan. 1, and continued in successful labor until dismissed January, 1880, on account of ill health; sailed for Europe July 14, 1881, journeyed in England, Scotland, Wales, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, France and the north of Ireland. Was absent six months, traveled twelve thousand miles, and was much improved in health. Commenced as stated supply in Sutton, Mass., November, 1884, and gave up the charge April, 1890, after a successful service of nearly six years.

LYMAN FLAGG THURSTON[8] (Moses,[7] Moses,[6] Moses,[5] Moses,[4] Abner,[3] James,[2] Daniel[1]), eldest son of Moses and Eliza (Chaffin) Thurston of Holden, Mass.; born there Dec. 25, 1841; married, Jan. 3, 1871, ALICE GERTRUDE SWETT, born Jan. 7, 1850, daughter of Samuel Doyne and Martha Page (Floyd) Swett of Worcester, Mass., where he is a mason and builder. He says: "When a boy twenty years old I was in the field with my uncle and some other men, mowing, where I could hear the drums beating to call in volunteers (this was after the first battle of Bull Run). It awoke my patriotism. I had just complained to my uncle that my scythe did not hang well. He said, 'No, it never hangs well, you are always complaining;' whereupon, hanging the scythe upon the limb of an apple tree, with the remark, 'It hangs well there,' I enlisted in the 21st Mass. regiment July, 1861; fought in the battles of Roanoke Island, Newburn, Feb. 1, 2, 3; Camden, N. C.; 2d Bull Run, Aug. 30; Chantilla, Sept. 1; South Mountain, Md., Sept. 14; Antietam, Sept. 15, 16, 17; Fredericksburg, Dec. 13, 1862; Blue Springs, Oct. 10; Campbell's Station, Tenn., Nov. 16, 1863; Siege of Knoxville. I reënlisted at Blaine Cross Roads, Eastern Tenn., and served until the close of the war; was wrecked in the Burnside expedition off Hatteras and fought in the battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania Court House, Cold Harbor, Bethel Church, and in front of Petersburg; was wounded there on the 28th of July, 1864, and narrowly escaped being taken prisoner. After being honorably discharged from the army I served three years at my trade. In the spring of 1869 I and my brother, Alvin Eugene Thurston, went west. Our first stopping place was Kansas City, Mo. I started from there with a party for Black Canon, Arizona. When near Salt Lake City we were attacked by the Indians, and the man riding next me was killed and several wounded, so that we were obliged to abandon our journey. I then returned to Worcester and settled down to my trade, and soon commenced business for myself, as builder and contractor, in which I have been quite successful."

POSTERITY OF JOHN THURSTON,

I AM strong in the belief that this family was kin to the preceding, but I cannot connect them.

First Generation.

JOHN THURSTON,[1] a carpenter of Wrentham, Suffolk county, Eng., baptized Jan. 13, 1601. May 10, 1637, John Thurston, aged 36, and his wife MARGARET, aged 32, were passengers for New England in the Mary Anne of Yarmouth, Eng. They brought two sons with them, and were received into the church in Dedham, Mass., she June 28, 1640, and he March 28, 1641. He became a freeman May 10, 1643, and it is recorded that he attended a meeting in Dedham in November, 1644,* to provide some means of education for the youth. He had a grant of land in Dedham, Feb. 16, 1643. His estate was part in Medfield, set off from Dedham in 1651. His famly settled in the adjoining towns of Wrentham and Medfield except Joseph, who is supposed to have gone to Jamaica, Long Island. She died May 9, 1662; he died in Medfield, Nov. 1, 1685.†

Children.

5541+Thomas,[2] bap. in Wrentham, Eng., Aug. 4, 1633; m. Sarah Thaxter.
5542+John,[2] bap. in Wrentham, Sept. 13, 1635; m. Mary Wood.
5543+Joseph,[2] bap. in Dedham, Mass., July 15, 1640; m. Anne ———.
5544 Benjamin[2] b. in Dedham, May 8, bap. July 15, 1640; m., Dec. 12, 1660, Elizabeth Walker, da. of Robert Walker of Boston, Mass. He was a freeman May 3, 1665, one of the founders of the third or "Old South" church in Boston, May 16, 1669, his wife also being an original member.‡ In 1675, before Philip's war, the General Court made him ensign under Capt. John Hull. His special friend, Charles Just. Small, says he died of small pox Nov. 10, 1678. They had, b. in Boston:
  5545 Mary[3] and Eleazer,[3] twins, b. April 24, 1662.
  5546 Mehitable,[3] b. Nov. 11, 1666.§ Boston records say Dec. 7, 1715, only surviving da. of Benjamin of Boston, sold land.
  5547 Mary,[3] b. Feb. 11, 1667.
  5548 John,[3] b. March 15, 1669.§
5549 Mary,[2] b. Jan. 8, and bap. Jan. 12, 1643; m., Dec. 27, 1660, Seth Smith.
5550+Daniel,[2] b. May 5, 1646; m. 1st, Maria ———; 2d, Hannah Miller.

*See note 1st ed. p. 356.

† His will, dated June 13, 1683, proved Oct. 21, 1686, gives his estate to sons Thomas, John, Daniel, Joseph, widow of Benjamin, da. Mary Smith, and sons-in-law Jona. Treadway and Joseph Chaney.

‡ The records of this church have the name of Margrett Thurston in 1668.

§ The records in Boston say children of Benjamin and Elishua. They may belong to another Benjamin, but we can find no trace of any other person by that name in these early days, and conclude that they are children of Benjamin and Elizabeth, and that there is some mistake in the date of Mehitable's birth.

5551 Judith,[2] b. Mar. 17, bap. Mar. 29, 1648; m., Mar. 10, 1666, Jonathan Treadway. She was received into the church in Dedham, Mar. 29, 1648.
5552 Hannah,[2] b. Feb. 28, 1650; m., March 12, 1668, Joseph Chaney.

NOTE. The town records of Medfield show that Deborah Thurston married Jabish Talman Nov. 18, 1665, and it seems almost certain that she was a daughter of the above John.[1] The town of Medfield was burned 1676 by Indians under King Philip, 30 houses, half of all; many of its people massacred, and Mary Thurston was wounded.

Second Generation.

THOMAS THURSTON[2] (John[1]), eldest son of John and Margaret Thurston of Dedham, Mass.; born in Wrentham, Eng., and baptized Aug. 4, 1633; married, "before Capt. Luther" of Dedham, Dec. 13, 1655 [county records say Nov. 10], SARAH THAXTER, daughter of Thomas Thaxter of Hingham, Mass. She died Sept. 1, 1678; he died May 20, 1704.

Thomas Thurston and Thomas jr., are on the list of names of those who came to Medfield from Dedham. Mr. Thurston was a man of much usefulness; one of the prudential committee and town clerk, 1673; the same year Thomas and John Thurston were on a committee chosen by the inhabitants of Dedham to manage the division of Wrentham from Dedham; sergeant in 1675, before Philip's war; made lieutenant in 1678; representative to the General Court in 1686, the last session before the abolition of the "good old charter," and was justice of the peace, with authority to solemnize marriages. Farnum thinks he must have been the man who received 544 votes for "assistant" in April, 1686.

†He invented a machine for splitting sides of leather; patent leather; he first made malleable iron in 1826; cutoff for steam engines; made the first daguerreotype in this country; made spelter and Russia sheet iron first of any one in this country; first proved that lightning-bolts as often come from the earth as the clouds; so improved the "Burr hat body forming machine" as to make it a practical machine; as an agriculturist, he raised strawberries 2 inches in diameter and weighing a full ounce, and thought he could, by 20 years' more experience, make them grow as large as a pineapple, and retain all the original flavor and fineness. He was taken prisoner during the revolutionary war as a privateer, and confined in the prison ship Jersey, in New York harbor.

‡In a letter from O. S. Boyden Dec. 7, 1882, he says, "A Mr. Francis W. Boyden wrote to my father in 1867 from Alexandria, Ind., saying, 'I am now 34 years old. . . . My father's name was David Boyden, b. in Chester, Vt., 1791, and d. 1853. His father was Jonathan Boyden. David had several brothers. My mother's name was Amy Wait, da. of Henry and Amia Wait of Vermont.'" My father replied, "My grandfather Atherton contracted in 1774 with the continental authorities to furnish what cannon and war stores he could, and retired to a sparingly settled woodland retreat, now known as the old Sharon Furnace, and built a furnace, and commenced casting cannon and shot and shells. The first cannon cast on this continent were cast there. Sharon Furnace was the headquarters for the inhabitants to assemble when there was an alarm given.

BENJAMIN THURSTON[3] (Joseph,[2] John[1]), eldest son of Joseph and Anne Thurston of Jamaica, L. I.; married SARAH ———. He was a blacksmith in Jamaica. In 1691 he was appointed on a committee to build a church, of which, Sept. 13, 1698, he was chosen superintend the building. This was probably an Episcopal church, as in 1700 he was chosen vestryman. The Earl of Belmont, governor of New York, in a letter to the lords of trade, dated Oct. 21, 1698, refers to the depositions of Benjamin Thurston and his brother Daniel, in an action against Col. Willet, member of the council, who was charged with piracy; March 6, 1692, was chosen tax collector; in 1700 he was 1st lieutenant in the foot company of Jamaica; 1708 only one person paid a higher tax than he, died intestate about 1710.

DANIEL THURSTON[3] † (Daniel,[2] John[1]), son of Daniel and Maria Thurston of Medfield, Mass.; born there Feb. 14, 1674; married,

*In the records of Hempstead we find these items: "In 1750 paid Joseph Thurston four shillings for digging a grave." "1779 paid Phebe Thurston, widow, twelve shillings for digging a grave." The scarcity of men, on account of the revolutionary war, may account for this. Same record also contains this: "Jan. 12, 1779, paid Phebe Thurston, widow, eight shillings for going to a woman in the poorhouse."

† Daniel Thurston, a weaver of Uxbridge, deeded land Dec. 10, 1741, to his sons "David and Benjamin, both of Uxbridge, husbandmen, in consideration of a general discharge given by Dorothy, widow of Joseph, both of Westboro, yeoman, deceased before the ensealing of the will, and truly executed by her as the guardian of all the surviving children of said Joseph deceased, of all her and their rights &c. to our honored father, Daniel Thurston's estate, late of said Uxbridge deceased, conveyed to said Dorothy, half part of certain land in Mendon, which was laid out to said Daniel Thurston late of Uxbridge by a committee who laid out the common &c. in Mendon."

ISRAEL THURSTON[7] (David,[6] Israel,[5] John,[4] Benjamin,[3] Joseph,[2] John,[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of David and Esther (Taylor) Thurston of Meadville, Penn.; born there Nov. 4, 1804; married, first, March 27, 1831, ALMIRA SMITH, born Feb. 8, 1811, died Oct. 13, 1841. Second, Jan. 26, 1843, JOANNA PHILLIPS, born June 6, 1806. He died Sept. 21, 1872, she died Feb. 4, 1874. He was a farmer at Meadville, had few educational privileges in early life, but he married a teacher, and having excellent natural abilities he was stirred to emulation by close application in all leisure hours; he mastered even the higher branches of English literature and science, of which he was proud to tell his sons. He was loved and cherished in the hearts of his children as but few parents are. He and all his brothers and sisters were highly respectable and christian people. The energy and intelligence was strongly developed in his children, who all attained a liberal education, and were teachers of repute in some of the best schools. To illustrate, an anecdote is related by the second wife: — "They lived upon a farm, and each child was required to help at an early age, giving no time to attend school in summer. Not long after this marriage he brought a spelling book home for his son, some nine or ten years of age, who was highly gratified with the present. The next morning he cut the covers off his book, rolled it up and put it in his pocket, and went out to plowing. His step-mother was amazed at the spoiling of the book, and told his father about it, who on his returning home interrogated him as to his strange conduct, and received the reply that he thought it would be a nice time to study when he was obliged to stop to rest the team, and his pocket was too small to hold the book with the cover on. In winters, for many years, in order to go to school, the children would rise early and work till school time, and when school was closed hurry home and work late in the evening. When at work with their father he took great pains to explain their studies." The children still retain the homestead, where their father and grandfather lived and died.

II. EBENEZER GROSVENOR, b. in Roxbury, Oct. 9, 1684, m. Ann Marcy; he d. in Pom-

David Hall and Martha (Newton) Grosvenor. Mr. Grosvenor lived more than half his life in Petersham, Mass., as a farmer and carpenter, was deacon of the Congregational church and selectman a number of years. In 1853 he moved to Worcester, and in 1856 to Kalamazoo, Mich., where he worked at his trade until 1863, when he went to Cranbury Station, N. J., taking charge of a farm belonging to his brother-in-law, J. V. Thurston [no. 6,247]. In 1868 he removed to Trenton, N. J., where he was engaged in building till October, 1879, when he moved to Worcester, and died July 11, 1889. A man strong in character, slow to speak and act, but always ready to assist in advancing the cause of Christ. He cared not for political distinction, being of a retiring disposition; he was better known in the church, where he was highly esteemed; but best of all was his home influence, there could be seen the power of self-control very marked; nothing like temper was ever manifested, quietly he would win others to his way of thinking, or else his wishes would be graciously given up, unless in so doing he must give up principle; that he could not do; he did right because it was right; and thus he grew old; years that brought wrinkles to his face added no decay to the life within, that will last forever. From the oldest, to the grandchild on his knee, everybody loved "grandpa."

LEMUEL SMITH THURSTON[8] (Israel,[7] David,[6] Israel,[5] John,[4] Benjamin,[3] Joseph,[2] John[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of Israel and Almira (Smith) Thurston of Mead Corners, Penn.; born there Feb. 5, 1834; married, Nov. 7, 1858, ELEANOR ARMSTRONG BARTLETT, born Sept. 22, 1838, daughter of Asa and Rosanna (Nelson) Bartlett of Kaneville, Kane county, Ill., and great-granddaughter of John Morrison of Stockbridge, Mass., who was stolen by the Indians when four years old, and retained by them fourteen years. The Indians planned the massacre of the whites. This boy feigned illness, and went out several times in the night, staying longer each time, until he thought he would have time to get out of hearing, when he ran to the settlement and informed the white people, and saved their lives. He later found his parents in the barracks, and did great service as interpreter in the treaty with the Indians at the close of the French and Indian war, in which he was a soldier. She was also great-granddaughter of John Nelson of revolutionary fame, who bore honorable scars received during the war. ARTHUR JEFFERSON THURSTON[8] (David,[7] Flavel,[6] Israel,[5] John,[4] Benjamin,[3] Joseph,[2] John[1]), son of David and Lurinda (Laing) Thurston of Shelbyville, Ind.; born in Hendricks township, April 11, 1849; married, in Johnson county, Ind., May 9, 1875, MARY JANE HACKNEY, born in Edinburg, Ind., Dec. 12, 1858, daughter of William Burrows and Elizabeth Jane (Richardson) Hackney. He labored upon his father's farm till nineteen years of age; prepared himself for teaching by attending Franklin college two years; taught with marked success till 1877, when he engaged in the sale of agricultural implements in Shelbyville. Beginning with the small capital he had saved by teaching, has been highly favored, and not only attained a decided lead in his line of business, but has acquired several fine farms in the vicinity, considerable town property, and built a fine large mansion on one of the principal streets in the city for the home of his family. Both he and his wife are active members of the First Baptist church, and their hands and purses are always open for every good cause in support of the church, its organizations, and a host of other benevolent objects. He is a member of the board of directors of Franklin college, life member of the Indiana Baptist State Convention, member of the Baptist Home Missionary Society; also K. of P. and I. O. O. F., a democrat in politics, but refuses all offices; his counsel is sought by the minister; the young look up to him for sympathy, and he is present at all the meetings of the church to do his part for the advancement of the cause of Christ. Slightly changing Shakespeare's praise of Brutus, we may say

His life so useful; and the elements
So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up
And say to all the world, This is a man!

ANGELIA LOUISA FRENCH THURSTON [8] (Daniel Sylvester,[7] Timothy,[6] John,[5] Benjamin,[4] Daniel,[3] Daniel,[2] John [1]), eldest child of Daniel Sylvester and Matilda (Benjamin) Thurston of Montpelier, Vt.; born there Dec. 4, 1837; married, first, in Madison, Wis., Sept. 18, 1856, BENJAMIN FRANKLIN KILGORE, whose father was a Methodist minister; he died July 4, 1857. Second, Aug. 25, 1859, DAVID NEWMAN, born in New York city, a dry goods merchant, a year in Cincinnati, O., fifteen years at Beaver Dam, Wis., and since in Lincoln, Neb.; superintendent of Sunday-school in the M. E. church fifteen years; Grand Worthy Chief Templar in Wisconsin, Grand Worthy Patriarch, and a prominent republican.

Mrs. Newman has quite a literary taste, a lady of great enthusiasm in the work of the Woman's National Home Missionary Society of the M. E. church, of which she has been state secretary for years; associate editor of the Heathen Woman's Friend, published at Boston, Mass.; a member of the Lecture Bureau of the National Woman's Temperance Union; has been heard on the platform in every northern and many of the southern states on mormonism and temperance; has represented the gentiles of Utah in the 49th, 50th and 51st national congress as a philanthropist, and secured an appropriation of $80,000 to establish a home for the dependent women who have renounced polygamy in Salt Lake City. She prepared three arguments on the Woman Question for the U. S. senate, which were introduced by Senator Edmunds; was the first woman ever elected to the General Conference of the M. E. church.

JOHN MELLEN THURSTON[8] (Daniel Sylvester,[7] Timothy,[6] John,[5] Benjamin,[4] Daniel,[3] Daniel,[2] John[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of Daniel Sylvester and Ruth (Town) Thurston of Montpelier, Vt.; born there Aug. 21, 1847; married, in Omaha, Neb., Dec. 25, 1872, MARTHA L. POLAND, born at Morrisville, Vt., May 12, 1848, daughter of Luther and Clara M. (Bennett) Poland of Omaha.

Altho Judge Thurston was born in Vermont he was early transplanted to the west. In 1854 his father's family removed to Madison, Wis., and two years later to Beaver Dam, in the same state. As a boy he worked on the farm each summer and devoted the winters to study in preparation for college. At the age of sixteen he entered Wayland University, and graduated at twenty. He then entered upon the study of the law, and May 21, 1869, was admitted to the bar in Columbia county, Wis. In October of that year he removed to Omaha, where he has since resided. While he has always taken an active and personal interest in political affairs, he has been thoroughly devoted to the law, and has made everything else subordinate to its pursuit. He has had charge — on one side or the other — of almost all important cases in that part of the country the past ten years, and has been successful in every case of great moment. His career is already an exceptional one, and to judge from the signs of the times, it is scarcely yet begun. To use the flowery phrases of a western paper: — "The footsteps of John M. Thurston are heard on the bridge that leads to fame; he is on the whole the most promising man in the west." From the appended list of the offices that he has held it will be seen that he has steadily advanced from one position of trust to another. He is now general solicitor of the Union Pacific Railway Company's system, and would have been elected to the United States senate four years ago, to succeed Senator Van Wyck, had not Senator Manderson been a resident of Omaha; as it was he had a strong following, sufficient to show that he will be the choice of his party for the next vacancy in that body from Nebraska. At the time of the last presidential inauguration his name was urged for a place in the cabinet as Secretary of the Interior. A petition was signed by the legislature and state officers of Nebraska, and was forwarded to Mr. Harrison, asking the appointment of Mr. Thurston. Colorado joined hands with Nebraska, and also presented to Mr. Harrison a petition signed by all the state officers and members of the legislature of that state saying that Mr. Thurston was the choice of Colorado for Secretary of the Interior. Kansas, Dakota and Wyoming also favored his appointment. To quote once more from a western paper: — "He is a typical western man; he understands the needs and wants of our people. He is the choice of the farmers and homesteaders, having risen from their ranks himself. He is the choice of the 'old soldiers,' and is in sympathy with them, his father having been a soldier, who only left the battlefield to die. The grand army will rally to his support. He is the choice of the whole people, for they have a faith that in his hands their interests will receive steadfast support. They recognize his superior ability and fitness for the place, as well as his manly and unflinching integrity." He is thus described in Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper:—"Hon. John M. Thurston of Omaha has long been known as an able lawyer, but it was not until the assembling of the Republican National Convention in Chicago, when he was made the temporary presiding officer, that he achieved a national reputation as an impressive orator. His speech, delivered upon that occasion, was one of great power, and elicited rapturous applause from the vast multitude present. Indeed, he was accorded, at its close, an ovation, such as few speakers ever receive. He has a strong, clear, penetrating voice, and every word is uttered with the utmost distinctness, and at no time is there any hesitation in his speech for want of a proper term to express his meaning. His command of language is very unusual, while grace and polish mark every sentence. Added to these accomplishments is a splendid presence, which at once stamps him as a man of more than average character, and as a leader of men instead of a follower."

Yours Truly
Jno M. Thurston

We give some of the positions he has held:—From April, 1872, to April, 1874, he was a member of the city council of Omaha. From April, 1874, to August, 1877, city attorney of Omaha, at which time he resigned the office of city attorney to accept the position of assistant attorney of the Union Pacific Railway Company; 1875 was a member of the Nebraska legislature, chairman of judiciary committee of the house and acting speaker; fall of 1875 was candidate of republican party for judge of third judicial district of Nebraska, but was defeated by democratic opposition; 1880 headed the Nebraska electoral ticket, and was electoral messenger; 1884 was chairman of republican delegation from Nebraska to the republican national convention of that year, in which convention he seconded the nomination of John A. Logan for vice-president. He was also delegate from Nebraska to the last national convention, and temporary chairman of the same. February 1, 1888, he became general solicitor of the Union Pacific Railway Company's system, which now embraces about eight thousand miles of railroad, extending into or thro almost every state or territory west of the Missouri river; also president of the Republican League of the United States.

board; he placed the vessel under the control of his wife, and as she ordered the captain to cast anchor whenever the wind blew fresh, the voyage occupied two weeks. There is an enlargement of the Hudson river, near Nyack, which was called the "Tappan See or Zee," the crossing of which gave the family much alarm. The rehearsal, in after years, of the alarm at crossing this inoffensive portion of the river was a source of great amusement to the children and grandchildren. He remained in New York till 1804, when he bought a beautiful farm near Hudson, called Mt. Laurel, where he spent the remainder of his days, with an unsullied character, universally beloved, died Jan. 6, 1809; she died Aug. 19, 1815, aged 65.*

He says: "June 6, 1861, I enlisted for 3 years in the 2d R. I. reg., Capt. Charles Turner; July 21 we fought our first battle at Bull Run, lost our colonel, major, and about 300 men. The reg. held the battle-field 45 minutes before assistance came. I was in ten other battles, the last one Antietam, which lasted 8 hours; wounded in the leg, and lay on the battle-field 3 days and 4 nights, with only 4 apples, 2 of which I gave to a wounded confederate who lay beside me, and afterward refused me a drink of cold water. I crept to the woods and made me crutches, and traveled 4 miles to a confederate tobacco house, where I was allowed to stay for a week, when a union ambulance came along and took me to Maryland, and from there to Washington hospital. I was allowed a furlough of 3 months. On my return to Washington hospital I was transferred to the 9th reg. veteran reserve corps, doing garrison duty around the outskirts of Washington. The Mosby guerrilas were working their way toward Philadelphia, and we were ordered to intercept them. We traveled for seven days behind them. Just before we reached Harrisburg we had a skirmish, which resulted in our having 9 killed and 30 wounded. From there we went to Philadelphia and back to Washington, where we were assigned to guard rebel prisoners. The greatest battle I fought in during the war was in front of Richmond, Va., 7 days and 7 nights continuous fighting; heavy loss of life on both sides. Part of the time we had to lie on our faces while the batteries fired over us. The cries of the wounded and dying were heart-rending." They have:

Children.

9037 Minerva,[7] b. April 20, 1818; m., May 23, 1844, Rev. Richard A. Chalker of Saybrook, Conn.; he grad. from Union theo. sem. of New York 1840, and became a Methodist clergyman, resident in Rondout, N. Y.; labored uninterruptedly till 1878, when he asked release for a year's rest. They both wear their years lightly; there is not a silver thread among her dark locks and but few in his. She says: "Our home we call 'Sunny Wild,' where we have a beautiful view of mountain, valley, river and sky as ever nature gave to mortal. As my eyes fell on the face of Robert L. Thurston (portrait opp. p. 304) it gave me a shock, almost like an electric battery, it was so much like my father, only that it looked older. The face, hair, whiskers, the large ear, the collar, the neckerchief, were all a copy of him. The expression was the same when silent, but when talking it became very animated, and his eyes were very handsome." This testimony is a strong evidence that this family were from Edward of Newport. My informant says their ancestors came from Rhode Island. They had:

9038 Abraham Pollock (Chalker), b. Sept. 21, 1845; grad. from Pennington (N. J.) sem. 1864, from Princeton 1868, and from Philadelphia Med. col. 1870, and soon commenced practice in Rondout, N. Y., residing with his parents; n.m.

EDWARD THURSTON[6] (Varnum,[5] Peleg,[4] Edward,[3] Thomas,[2] Edward[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of Varnum and Mary (Gardner) Thurston of Fall River, Mass.; born there Sept. 4, 1804; married, Feb. 28, 1828, SARAH MARIA MASON, born May 4, 1810, daughter of Anthony and Lillis (Wood) Mason of Fall River. He was a mason and builder in Fall River,* died June 2, 1880.

*Mr. Thurston was born on the farm where he died, one of a family of 13 children, and at the age of 10 was sent out into the world to earn his own living; went into the family of Joseph Gardner in Swansea, Mass., and there remained until he was 17 years old. We can trace thro all of his future life the training he received at the hands of Mr. Gardner. With all of his earthly possessions in a handkerchief he came to Fall River, Mass., and engaged to serve a term as an apprentice to Anthony Mason to learn the mason trade. Soon after he was out of his time he began to carry on the building business. If we could trace the growth of this city from 1825, what a picture it would introduce us to! With but two or three factories, and those Mr. Thurston had worked on while learning his trade,—a score or more of houses, and those of the most ordinary kind—ragged and projecting rocks where Pocasset St. now is, the stream which gave the city its name leaping and bounding down its steep and rocky bed. And this wildness and roughness has been brought to its present state of usefulness and beauty by such men as Edward Thurston, Luther Kingsley, Samuel Luther and others.

The Robeson Print Works was one of the first contracts Mr. Thurston made, and when we contrast the cost of building for the past ten years with the cost then, it seems too incredible to believe. The price paid for taking the stone from the ledge, furnishing lime, sand, staging, and doing the work, was $1.00 per cord, and at so small a price he made money on the job. But how? Midnight would find Mr. Thurston at work changing staging, in preparation for the next day, which began at 4 o'clock and ended at 8 at night, with time enough for the men to eat their meals, which they either brought or had sent at the proper time. At about this time Mr. Thurston built for Mr. Holder Borden two of the brick houses known as the Borden houses. The price paid for the labor of building cellar, laying one hundred thousand bricks, lathing and plastering, was $275. Those who are living, that can remember from 1825 to 1835, will call to mind the enormous amount of work that was performed for a small amount of money. There was a desire then to see how much could be done for the amount paid, and not how little. The work was not slighted or cheapened in any way, but today stands as a monument of faithfulness to the builders. After the fire in 1843, Mr. Thurston began with a larger number of men and apprentices, and built nearly the whole square, corner of Main and Bedford streets, the Leander Borden block, and many of the private residences throughout the city. He was at one time surveyor of highways, and put the same energy into the work for the city that he did for himself. In 1855 he moved from Pearl St. to the homestead, which he had bought when it was about to pass out of the family. It is now one of the best cultivated farms in this section. He was a member of the Franklin St. Christian church, and after that was given up, of the North church at Steep Brook. In all positions, — as a devoted and respected member, as deacon, superintendent and teacher in Sunday-school, he gave evidence that his close application to business did not prevent his reading and studying the Word of God, and but few could be found who were as familiar with the Bible as he. It is not too much to believe that his success in life, the strength to labor as he did to gain the end sought, was attributable to his practice, — never varied, never given up or omitted, no matter how tired or how late the hour — of gathering the family in the quiet and close of the day, reading a chapter in the Bible, always followed by comments suggested, and prayer. As a husband and father he insisted on close application to the duties of the hour, and his energy was felt in that there was no time for idleness by any member of the family. Other cities can name more learned and popular men, but Fall River can stand as firm upon the integrity, honesty, frugality and industry of such men as Edward Thurston, as she remains firm upon the granite upon which she is built. They celebrated their golden wedding Feb. 28, 1878, an event of rare enjoyment for all who were present.

DR. WILLIAM TORREY THURSTON[6] (John Robinson,[5] John,[4] Peleg,[3] Thomas,[2] Edward[1]), third child of John Robinson and Mary Ann (Bruce) Thurston of St. Christophers, W. I.; born in St. Kitts, W. I., July 14, 1805; married, March 15, 1832, CAROLINE THURSTON, daughter of Governor Jeremiah and Sarah (Babcock) Thurston of Hopkinton, R. I. [no. 9,260]. She died July, he died Oct. 23, 1886.

Dr. Thurston studied medicine and surgery in the New York hospital, and received his diploma in 1829; commenced practice in his native town of St. Kitts, and while there took part in quelling an insurrection of the negroes, in which encounter he was severely wounded. He practiced his profession in Portland, Me., 1842 and 1843, and after in Westerly, R. I. Mustered into the U. S. A. as surgeon of the 1st R. I. Light Artillery, Oct. 4, 1861, and joined the Army of the Potomac, then organizing under Gen. McClellan; served throughout the Peninsular Campaign, and was present at the battles of Seven Pines, Fair Oaks, Peach Orchard, Savage Station, White Oak Swamp, Glendale and Malvern Hill. At the battle of Savage Station he received a severe wound from a bullet from a shrapnell shell, which fractured his skull, but with Spartan firmness he bound up his head with a wet towel, and thro the fearful battle and the retreat which followed performed his duty, and brought off the wounded men under his charge in safety to Harrison's Landing. Receiving a furlough of a few weeks to recover from his wound, he rejoined the army at the second battle of Bull Run, and marched into Maryland with McClellan, being present at the battle of South Mountain. Here he was seized with a severe attack of vertigo, caused by his poorly-healed wound, and finding himself unable to bear the heat of the sun he resigned, and was immediately placed by the surgeon-general in charge of a large hospital in Frederick City, Md., where he received in one day five hundred of the wounded from Antietam. Subsequently assigned to the hospital at Portsmouth Grove, where he remained until the close of the war. In November, 1876, he was appointed superintendent of the R. I. hospital, where he remained until May, 1882, when the infirmities of age and deafness, caused by his wound, compelled him to retire from active employment, and to seek repose in his home at Nayatt Point, Barrington, R. I. His memory was remarkably retentive of even the smallest details, and his mental faculties remained unimpaired. His manners were of the "old school" of politeness, and they endeared him to all. Of a self-sacrificing spirit that always thought first of the good of others, and a temper that never knew ruffling except under the grossest provocation, his old age stole quietly upon him in the retirement of his country home, and the final end found him not only prepared, but willing and eager to go to his eternal rest.

ROBERT HENRY THURSTON[7] (Robert Lawton,[6] Peleg,[5] John,[4] Jonathan,[3] Edward,[2] Edward[1]), eldest son of Robert Lawton and Harriet (Taylor) Thurston of Providence, R. I.; born there Oct. 25, 1839; married, first, at Providence, Oct. 5, 1865, SUSAN TAYLOR GLADDING, born June 26, 1838, daughter of Nathaniel and Susan Gladding of Providence; she died March 31, 1878. Second, at "Brightside," Dansville, N. Y., Aug. 4, 1880, LEONORA BOUGHTON, born May 22, 1848, eldest daughter of Eli Henry and Olive (Whittaker) Boughton of Summit, N. J.

"Mr. Thurston was trained in the workshops of his father, and graduated from Brown University in 1859; was engaged with the business firm of which his father was senior partner until 1861, when he entered the navy as an officer of engineers; served during the civil war on various vessels; was present at the battle of Port Royal and at the siege of Charleston; was attached to the North and South Atlantic squadrons until the close of 1865, when he was detailed as assistant professor of natural and experimental philosophy at the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., where he also acted as lecturer on chemistry and physics. In 1870 he visited Europe, for the purpose of studying the British iron manufacturing districts, and in 1871 was appointed professor of mechanical engineering at the Stevens Institute of Technology. In this year he conducted, in behalf of a committee of the American Institute, a series of experiments on steam boilers, in which, for the first time, all losses of heat were noted, and by condensing all the steam generated, the quantity of water entrained by the steam was accurately measured. In 1873 he was appointed a member of the U. S. Scientific Commission to the Vienna Exhibition; served upon the international jury, edited the Report of the Commissioners (in which he published his own report on machinery and manufactures), in four large 8vo. volumes, 1875-6. In 1874 and subsequently he conducted, at the Stevens Institute of Technology, a series of researches on the efficiency of prime movers and machines, and upon the strength and other essential properties of the materials of construction. In 1875 he was appointed a member of the U. S. Commission on the causes of boiler explosions, and of the Board to test the metals used in construction. He is a member of various scientific associations in the United States, Great Britain, France and Germany, and has written numerous papers on technical subjects, which have appeared in scientific journals in Europe and America, and has prepared articles upon similar topics for this Cyclopedia. . . . . Among his numerous inventions are the magnesium ribbon lamp, a magnesium-burning naval and army signal apparatus, an autographic recording testing machine, a new form of steam engine governor, an apparatus for determining the value of lubricants," etc. — Johnson's Univ. Cyclopedia.

He organized, about 1873, or earlier, what was probably the first mechanical laboratory for research in engineering that was ever founded, and for the dozen years succeeding kept it employed constantly in the investigation of problems of practical importance. He was, meantime (1875-8), a member of the U. S. Board appointed to test iron, steel, and other metals, directed the greater part of the work completed by that board, and, as its secretary, edited its reports. His investigations of the laws of friction and of properties of the alloys of copper, tin and zinc, which resulted in the determination, by a new and ingenious method, of the relative values of all combinations of those elements, were perhaps the most striking, original and famous of these researches.

In July, 1885, Professor Thurston was solicited to assume charge of the mechanic arts department of Cornell university. It was proposed to create a school of mechanical engineering and the mechanic arts, to create a directorship, and to make of Sibley college a real college of engineering. Professor Thurston was asked to reorganize the college on the enlarged basis. The offer was accepted, and Prof. Thurston left the Stevens Institute of Technology, receiving as testimonial of affection the Doctorate of Engineering from the faculty and trustees.

In 1878 he published a History of the Growth of the Steam Engine, International series, 12mo., Dr. Appleton & Co., N. Y.; 1883-5, Materials of Engineering, 3 vols., 8vo., J. Wiley & Sons, N. Y.; 1885, Friction and Lost Work in Machinery and Millwork, 8vo., same publishers; 1885, Text-book of Materials of Construction, 8vo.; 1887, Steam Boiler Explosions, 12mo.; 1888, Manual of Steam Boilers, 8vo. Since then he has written Manual of the Steam Engine, 1890 in two vols., 8vo., 871 and 934 pp.; Heat Energy and its Transformations, Translation of Sadi Carnot's Reflexions sur la Puissance Motrice du Feu, and Life of Robert Fulton. He was made vice-president of the American Institute of Mining Engineers in 1878; was made vice-president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, at Nashville, in 1877, in the absence of Prof. Pickering, elected at the preceding meeting, and was regularly elected to serve again in 1878, at the St. Louis meeting of the association, and again in 1884, in which year he was also made vice-president of the British Association. In 1880 he was elected the first president of the then just organized American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and was re-elected in 1882. He is a member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States.

The decoration of Officeur de l' Instruction Publique was conferred upon Dr. Thurston by the French Republic, on the occasion of his service as a vice-president of the Grand Jury and on the Superior Jury, and in the Class Juries of the Exposition Internationale, Paris, 1889, on which occasion he received the honor of a double nomination as Officer of the Legion of Honor by the International Jury and by the Commissioner General of the United States. In the same year he was made LL.D. by Brown University. In addition to the above, he is also connected with the following and other societies:

American Association for Advancement of Science; New York Academy of Sciences; Franklin Institute of Pennsylvania; American Institute of New York; American Society of Civil Engineers; American Institute of Mining Engineers; Institute of Engineers and Shipbuilders of Scotland; British Institution of Naval Architects; British Institution of Civil Engineers; Société des Ingenieurs Civils (France); Verein Dutscher Ingenieure; Oesterreichische Ingenieur-und-Architekten Verein; Société Industrielle de Mulhouse; The Royal Society of Sweden. He was also a member of the New Jersey State Commission to report a Plan for Encouragement of Manufactures of Ornamental and Textile Fabrics; United States Commission on Bank Vault and Safe Construction, etc.

Dr. Thurston is now at Cornell University, Director of Sibley College, and Professor of Engineering in that institution; he is giving all his leisure, apart from his regular duties and the calls of social life, to putting into permanent form facts and data accumulated during a professional life of exceptional opportunities, and publishing the material which he has gathered during the last thirty years. He has published about 250 scientific papers, and some fifteen volumes of professional treatises and manuals—Men and Women of the Time.

*"They had, 1888, 9 children, 12 grandchildren, 10 g-g-children, and 1 g-g-g-child, over 4 years old. He lived and died within 200 rods of where he was born, and 5 generations are living within speaking distance of each other. Not long since the 5 generations spent an evening at a husking bee, where the babe husked over a bushel of corn. For a number of years, when the country was new, the old gentleman kept a repair shop for the accommodation of the neighbors, where they went to get shoes (before boots came into general use) made and mended, harnesses and brass kettles repaired, cart and wagon wheels made as good as new, and all the other parts of different vehicles supplied, clocks cleaned and musical instruments put in order, beside attending to the wants of the boys with their handsleds, and ladies with their churns and flat-irons. In fact, everything that was out of order went to 'uncle Linus'' shop, and came out with a new lease of life and usefulness. He always voted the republican ticket, never missed a state election, and never was out of the state. He never used tobacco nor intoxicating drinks, tho nearly everybody used it in those days; joined the Methodist church in 1816, and continued firm in the faith, a humble follower of Christ."

DANIEL BEARSS THURSTON[8] (Samuel,[7] Daniel Greene,[6] Norton,[5] Samuel,[4] Edward,[3] Samuel,[2] Edward[1]), brother of the preceding, and son of Samuel and Prudence (Bearss) Thurston of Laketon, Ind.; born there Feb. 5, 1837; married, April 19, 1862, NANCY SCHULER, born Jan. 28, 1840, daughter of Robert and Betsey (Reusz) Schuler of Wabash. She was converted at fourteen, and united with the Presbyterian church, of which her parents were members. After marriage she became a member of the Methodist church, that she might be in the same communion with her husband; was an earnest and efficient worker in the cause of the church and temperance, until failing health compelled retirement. In the last weary months of suffering she was patient, brave and trustful, in the fullest degree enjoying the assurance of the christian's hope; died Sept. 4, 1885. She will be long remembered by hosts of friends in the places where she lived for the sterling qualities of christian womanhood, which shone so brightly in her character. He was a druggist and stationer in Blue Earth City, Minn., since 1888 general agent Wabash School Furnishing Co., in Red Oak, Ia.; was a member of the Methodist church, treasurer, steward, and superintendent of the Sunday-school; served as delegate to the U. Page 120, no. 594: Moses Thurston was in the revolutionary war when quite young, driving a supply wagon, which he kept for nearly 11 years; he was firm in the orthodox faith, and used to preach in Pittsburg, N. H., in Corinth and Orange, Vt., and in several townships in Clearfield Co., Penn.; was a great exhorter, and led many to enlist under the banner of Christ. He was a man of commanding presence, 6 feet in height; held the reins of government with strong hands—his word was law—brought up his family to respect and love religion, and take the teachings of Jesus as the guide of their lives, and they all became honored members of society. He was social and generous in nature, full of energy and perseverance. He was thrown from a carriage when over 70, breaking one leg and dislocating a hip, which his surgeon could not set, but after months in bed he was able to walk with a crutch or long cane, and visited his son in Avon, Me., walking most of the way going and returning, as the jar of the carriage gave him such pain in the hip.

Omitted in Index of Thurstons — Harvey Nelson, page 440.

A letter dated Stratham, N. H., May 31, 1878, says, — "The old Swamscot burying-ground, where all the first settlers were buried, has been plowed up within a few years. The gravestones were either broken up or carted away, and used for other purposes. There is no one by the name of Thurston living in town at the present time." The above shows the singular mutations frequently occurring in regard to families and names. A century ago it would appear that the principal part of the place was owned by Thurstons, and the enterprise and activities of this whole region were almost entirely in the hands of persons of that name.
